Annex I

Description of Requirements

| Context of the Requirement | Iran is witnessing a remarkable increase in addiction to substances other than opioids in the recent decades. Psychostimulants particularly methamphetamine are apparently responsible for another lot of overdose especially in combination with opioid usage. It is not clear in how far ATS poisoning is diagnosed. This is because the signs and symptoms of ATS overdose often mimic cardio-vascular [hypertension, arrhythmias, cardiac ischaemia (cocaine in particular) and aortic dissection]; cerebro-vascular [central nervous system - haemorrhagic and non-haemorrhagic stroke, seizures, coma, cerebral vasculitis]; respiratory; acute renal failure; musculoskeletal [rhabdomyolysis] and other disorders [serotonin toxicity, hyperthermia, syndrome of inappropriate antidiuretic hormone, obstetric complications, urinary retention] and maybe so may remain undiagnosed in the absence of toxicology screening.

The present activity intends to shed light on the reasons for non-fatal overdose especially among women with drug use problems and children as a first phase preceding developing a model for the prevention of fatal overdose among women and children in the next step. This activity is to be implemented in close collaboration with the Iranian Drug Control Headquarters (DCHQ) under the gracious funding from the Kingdom of Norway.

IRN/Z78 - “Drug Use Prevention, Treatment, Rehabilitation, and HIV Care”
Under the UNODC Country Programme Partnership in the Islamic Republic of Iran (2015 – 2021)

“Conduct an assessment on the situation of drug-induced mortality with special emphasis on women and children in the city of Tehran”

Background and Context

Worldwide, about 0.5 million deaths are attributable to drug use annually. Drug-related mortality encompasses both: i) drug-induced deaths [which could also be accidental and occurring to individuals not necessarily dependent on drug use] and ii) mortality rates among people with problematic drug use [such as death resulting from infectious diseases etc]. More than 70% of drug-related deaths are linked to opioids, with more than 30% of those deaths caused by overdose. Opioid overdoses that do not lead to death are several times more common than fatal overdoses. According to the most recent World Drug Report, an estimated 585,000 people died as a result of drug use in 2017. Statistics on drug-related deaths in Asia are unreliable due to poor regional coverage and reporting of mortality data, however, it is estimated that the Asian sub-region accounts for 35 per cent of the global total of drug-related deaths.

The WHO International Classification of diseases in its 10 Clinical Modification edition (ICD 10 CM) specifies toxic effects of substances chiefly nonmedicinal as to source T51-T65 directly contributing to death: “the disease or injury which initiated the train of events leading directly to death, or the circumstances of the accident or violence which produced the fatal injury.” When overall drug overdoses are reported, intentional and unintentional overdoses are counted, along with drug poisonings inflicted by another person with intent to injure or kill, and overdoses in which the intent to harm cannot be determined. The specific coding includes: accidental/unintentional poisoning by and exposure to drug; intentional self-harm; assault/homicide; event of undetermined intent. Drug overdose deaths involving selected drug categories are identified by specific multiple cause-of-death codes, such as for opium (T40.0); heroin (T40.1); natural and semi-synthetic opioids (T40.2); methadone, a synthetic opioid (T40.3); synthetic opioid analgesics other than methadone, (T40.4); cocaine (T40.5); and psychostimulants with abuse potential, which includes methamphetamine (T43.6).

The number of drug overdoses has increased in recent years in several countries, in part due to the increased use of opioids in the management of chronic pain and increasing use of highly potent opioids appearing on the illicit drug market. Several risk factors are associated with both fatal and non-fatal overdose have been identified such as opioid availability, combination of opioids and other psychoactive substances, or a lack of access to agonist treatment. Access to evidence-based treatment, including medication-assisted therapy, helps to prevent drug-related deaths and aids people with opioid use disorders to improve their health and well-being. Another factor is the increase in the licit and illicit use of opioids also contributing directly or indirectly to increase in accidental fatal overdoses. In the United States the mortality rate of children and adolescents due to opioid overdose increased by 268.2%, often a result of poisoning 5.

According to the World Drug Report the drug-related mortality in Iran was 52.5 per million people aged 15-64 years of age. Official data on drug related mortality among women do not exist, however the interviews of responsible entities of the Iranian Legal Medicine Organisation with the press, indicate that women made-up 15.6% of these cases (corresponding to ca. 500 people in 2020). The risk factors, mechanisms and patterns of overdose among women in the country are not known and call for an interdisciplinary assessment by forensic specialists, toxicologists, drug use treatment specialists and field workers.

Pharmaceutical and non-pharmaceutical opioids have become the main causes of poisoning in Iran. younger ages of drug use initiation, simultaneous use of methamphetamine and multiple drug use seem to predispose to opioid overdose. On the other hand, regular referral to harm reduction centres seems to be connected to lower overdose risks.

While methadone maintenance therapy is an effective prevention measure against opioid overdose, accidental and suicidal methadone use have caused serious overdose. Toxic poisoning with methadone seems being common in children in Iran. the parent of these children often use methadone for their drug dependence problem.

Iran is witnessing a remarkable increase in addiction to substances other than opioids in the recent decades. Psychostimulants particularly methamphetamine are apparently responsible for another lot of overdose especially in combination with opioid usage. It is not clear in how far ATS poisoning is diagnosed. This is because the signs and symptoms of ATS overdose often mimic cardio-vascular [hypertension, arrhythmias, cardiac ischaemia (cocaine in particular) and aortic dissection]; cerebro-vascular [central nervous system - haemorrhagic and non- haemorrhagic stroke, seizures, coma, cerebral vasculitis]; respiratory; acute renal failure; musculoskeletal [rhabdomyolysis] and other disorders [serotonin toxicity, hyperthermia, syndrome of inappropriate antidiuretic hormone, obstetric complications, urinary retention] and maybe so may remain undiagnosed in the absence of toxicology screening.

The present activity intends to shed light on the reasons for non-fatal overdose especially among women with drug use problems and children as a first phase preceding developing a model for the prevention of fatal overdose among women and children in the next step. This activity is to be implemented in close collaboration with the Iranian Drug Control Headquarters (DCHQ) under the gracious funding from the Kingdom of Norway.

Purpose

Identify causal factors in drug-induced overdoses especially among women and children in the city of Tehran by assessing circumstances and causes of non-fatal overdoses.

Duration of work

The work will be accomplished from Mid December 2021 - 31 March 2022

Location:

The study will be conducted in Tehran, Iran.
