The crisis in Yemen demonstrates how chronic developmental issues compound and exacerbate humanitarian needs, particularly in situations where institutions are too weak to respond effectively. The severe impact on sectors like agriculture and fishers, responsible for major workforce, demonstrates that, both humanitarian and developmental issues need to be handled simultaneously.

Objective

The project aims to strengthen the resilience of the Yemeni community to cope with the effects of the current unrest and enable those whose livelihoods were severely disrupted to recover and rebuild their lives.

Value

This project helps equip communities to secure reliable income sources, access to equipment and tools, productive assets, and foster supportive relationships. It helps to strengthen local and technical capacities of the agriculture and fisheries institutions so that they are capable continue to support communities in sustainable manner.

Activities

Project activities include capacity building and training on self-learning provision of self-learning equipment/inputs for improvement of artisanal skills for building productive assets, business skill development training on micro and small-scale enterprise, and provision of seed grant for micro/small scale enterprise establishment.
