Preface

The Improper Solicitation and Graft Act ("the Anti-Solicitation Act" or "the Act") was enacted in March, 2015 with the aim of eradicating improper entertainment offering and solicitation culture of the Korean society and bringing greater fairness and transparency to the society, and it will come into effect on September 28, 2016.

Now that the aspiration of the people to make this country a truly advanced one by rooting out corruption came into fruition, it is highly important to lay the institutional foundation to ensure the Act is implemented in the right manner that upholds the original intent of the Act.

In order to enhance the binding force of the Act which came into effect for the first time, it is essential to provide clear interpretation of prohibited activities and rules of punishment under the Act to ensure that the persons or entities who are affected by the Act have a sufficient understanding of the Act.

To this end, the Anti-Corruption and Civil Rights Commission (ACRC) appointed an advisory council that consisted of professors and lawyers to review and consult on interpretation of each provision of the Act and related issues. The result of the review and consultation is this Handbook of the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act.

We hope this Handbook will serve as useful guidelines not only for public officials but also for the general public to ensure public officials will perform their duties properly and to enhance the people's trust in public institutions.

I. Background & Progress

I

Background & ProgressArticle 1 (Purpose)

The purpose of this Act is to ensure that public servants, etc. perform their duties in a fair manner and to secure public confidence in public institutions, by prohibiting any improper solicitation made to public servants, etc., and by prohibiting public servants, etc. from receiving money, goods, etc.

1 BackgroundA. Realization of constitutional values

The Preamble of the Constitution of the Republic of Korea expresses commitment to building a transparent, corruption-free and righteous society, stipulating, "We, the people of Korea, proud of a resplendent history and traditions dating from time immemorial... destroy all social vices and injustice..."

Since the Anti-Corruption Act entered into force in 2002, the Anti-Corruption and Civil Rights Commission (formerly, Korea Independent Commission Against Corruption) has engaged in anti-corruption activities in many different sectors in order to uphold such constitutional values. As a dedicated organization to corruption prevention under the UN Convention Against Corruption (UNCAC), the Commission assumes full responsibility for implementation of the anti-corruption policies specified in the Convention and expansion and distribution of knowledge on corruption prevention.

The Improper Solicitation and Graft Act was also intended as part the anti-corruption policies to bring an end to improper solicitation and bribery which are malicious customs of our society.

B. Enhancing public confidence in public officials

Despite the government and the ACRC's efforts to prevent corruption, instances of corruption and irregularities involving public officials have never ceased to occur. Public trust in the Korean society as a whole is very low. The ACRC's Corruption Perceptions Survey 2015 showed that 59.2% of the general public responded that our society is corrupt.

As for perception of the public sector's level of corruption, there is a considerable gap between the general public and public officials. In the ACRC's Corruption Perceptions Survey 2015, only 3.4% of public officials responded that the public sector was corrupt while 57.8% of the general public viewed the public sector as corrupt. This means that the level of integrity that the people expect from public officials is much higher than the level public officials themselves assume. It also indicates that there is widespread suspicion and distrust in public officials.

C. Enhancing international anti-corruption rating and national competitiveness

Korea scored 56 out of 100 in the 2015 Corruption Perceptions Index (CPI) of Transparency International, ranking 37th among 168 countries. Among the 37 OECD member countries, Korea has remained in the 27th place for the past 5 years. Given that the CPI is an index measuring perceptions of corruption, the low score is a reflection that the business people and experts who work in Korea - both expatriates and local residents - have negative perceptions of the corruption level in our society.

Changes in CPI score of Korea

According to the 2016 Asia Corruption Index of the Hong Kong Political and Economic Risk Consultancy (PERC), Korea's corruption score slightly improved from the previous year but is still lower than other advanced economies in Asia.

Changes in PERC Corruption Score of Korea

Classification	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016
Score	4.97	4.88	5.90	6.90	6.98	7.05	6.28	6.17
Rank/No. of countries	7/16	6/16	9/16	11/16	10/17	9/16	9/16	8/16

* Scaled from 0 to 10: zero being the best grade possible and 10 the worst

The international community's perception of corruption in Korea is more negative than the level expected for a country of this economic size and competitiveness.

This leads to reduced investment by foreign companies, hindering the country's economic growth. According to the Putting An End to Corruption report published by the OECD Secretariat in May, 2016, a research result showed that the probability of foreign direct investment (FDI) is 15% lower in countries with a strong presence of corruption than in countries relatively free of corruption.

D. Narrowing the scope of “unethical but legal corruption”

The Improper Solicitation and Graft Act is a product of the policy efforts to build the institutional foundation commensurate with the people's expectation by narrowing the scope of "unethical but legal corruption."

The concept of corruption has been understood differently depending on the cultural background of a given society and when and where it is applied. The United Nations Convention Against Corruption (UNCAC), a multi-national convention with 175 states parties did not define corruption for the reason that providing a definition of corruption could lead to narrowing of the scope of corruption given that the concept of corruption varies depending on social and cultural contexts and new types of corruption continue to surface over time.

Traditional concept of corruption points to activities that are unethical and at the same time defined as illegal such as bribery and embezzlement of public funds. On the other hand, Recent concept of corruption includes not only corruption in its traditional sense but also activities that are legal but unethical.

E. Addressing the blind spot of the existing corruption control system

The general public has higher expectations for the integrity of public officials and there have been changes in the criteria that determine corrupt activities. Activities that used to be regarded as generally accepted practices such as sponsoring, rice cake payments, farewell gifts, and activities whose purposes do not have to do with earning any kind of favor are also perceived as the beginning of corruption.

In addition, there arose a need for addressing the blind spot of the existing anti-corruption laws and regulations in order to respond to new types of corruption that are increasingly diversified, clandestine and sophisticated. So, it is not enough to rely on individuals' self-regulation based on their own conscience, which gives rise to the need for additional legislation that provides clearer boundaries of ethics and morality.

F. Addressing the "social and cultural factors that induce corruption"

Effective resolution of corruption issues requires identification of their root causes taking into account the changing nature of corruption and the expectations of the general public. Corruption in Korean society is largely attributable to its social culture that induces corruption such as deep-rooted practices of solicitation and entertainment offering culture. In the ACRC's Corruption Perceptions Survey 2015, the general public (36.3%), public officials (46.1%), business leaders (42.3%) and expatriates (33.8%) all pointed out the "social culture that induces corruption" as the main cause of corruption in our society.

In Korea, people are strongly connected with each other not only through blood ties, school relations and regionalism but also other connections built through all sorts of social activities. Widespread practices of solicitation based on such connections is a chronic ill that must be eradicated especially in the public sector where officials are supposed to make decisions in a fair and transparent manner. In a society where improper solicitation is prevalent, people tend to attempt resolving issues through unofficial routes and personal connections, and this eventually leads to mutual distrust.

Financial advantages or entertainment are offered to a public official with the expectation of support in one form or another though it is neither intended for an immediate favor nor directly related to the duties of the public official. In the ACRC's Corruption Perceptions Survey 2015, 40.2% of the general public, 62.9% of business leaders and 50.0% of expatriates cited "maintenance of smooth relationships and common practices" as their motive to offer public officials financial advantages and entertainment. The entertainment offering culture not only stands in the way of fair competition and hinders public officials' fair performance of duties but it also gives rise to suspicion about and distrust in the public sector.

2 History

A. From development of government bill on Improper Solicitation and Graft Act to Submission to National Assembly (Jun. 2011 ~ Aug. 2013)

The Cabinet Council on June 14, 2011 began to discuss enactment of a law tentatively named the Anti-Solicitation and Pursuit of Personal Interests Act as part of its effort to make Korean society fairer and more transparent.

The ACRC proposed a bill on Prevention of Unjust Solicitations and Conflicts of Interest. On October 18, 2011, the first public forum was held to discuss the necessity and direction of the legislation and to review similar laws in Korea and abroad. On February 21, 2012, the second public forum was held to disclose the bill and discuss each provision and collect opinions from the legal community, the media, academia and civic groups. From April through May, 2012, there were briefing sessions in each region (Honam, Chungchung and Kyungsang region) to publicize the law and to collect opinions from local government officials and citizens. From April through July, 2012, the Korea Legislation Research Institute conducted the Analytical Research on "Legislative Analysis on the Bill on Prevention of Unjust Solicitations and Conflicts of Interest, a Comprehensive Response to Public Corruption."

The government legislative procedure started and from May through August, 2012, relevant ministries were consulted for their opinions on the bill. From August 22 through October

2, 2012, preliminary announcement was made on the legislation. In February, 2013, enactment of the legislation was selected as a national agenda of the then incoming administration (No. 137 Innovative public sector and clean government). On July 30, 2013, the government bill developed through close cooperation with relevant ministries was passed at the Cabinet Council. On August 5, 2013, the finalized government bill was submitted to the National Assembly.

B. From submission to National Assembly to enactment and promulgation of the Act (August 2013~ March 2015)

The parliamentary discussion on the submitted government bill was accelerated after the Sewol ferry accident in April, 2014 which triggered passage of a package of bills aimed at preventing repetition of such a disaster. The legislative review subcommittee of the National Policy Committee met six times on Apr. 25, May 23, May 27, Dec. 2, and 3, 2014, and Jan. 8, 2015 to review the bill. On January 12, 2015, the bill was passed at the general meeting of the National Policy Committee. It was agreed at the general meeting to leave out the provision on conflict of interest of public officials and include private schools and media companies in the scope of application. On March 3, 2015, the bill also passed the general meeting of the Legislation and Judiciary Committee and the Plenary Session of the National Assembly. On March 27, 2015, the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act was enacted and promulgated. The Act is slated to enter into effect on September 28, 2016.

3 Purposes of the Legislation

A. Gaining the people's trust in public institutions

Irregularities start from the practices where solicitation is accepted as a norm due to widespread nepotism and paternalism in our society. The Improper Solicitation and Graft Act is intended to ensure fair performance of duties on the part of public officials or relevant persons by sanctioning and preventing improper solicitation in corruption-prone areas.

The Korean public has become increasingly distrustful of the public sector after some public officials who accepted large amounts of money, goods, etc. escaped punishment for the reason that it was not in exchange for a favor and was unrelated to their duties. The Improper Solicitation and Graft Act is aimed at winning the people's trust by making it possible to sanction public officials for acceptance of bribes even when it is not in exchange for a favor and is unrelated to their duties.

B. Protection of public officials and others who perform public duties

Public officials' accepting improper solicitation or money, goods, etc. undermines fairness of their performance of duties. So, the Act also serves to protect the other honest public officials who follow procedures specified in the Act from the responsibility that might be imposed on them ex post facto.

If the spouse of a public official accepts benefits in connection with the public official's duties, the public official shall be subject to punishment and the level of punishment shall be the same as the level they would receive when directly accepting such benefits. However, there is also a provision that exempts from liability the public official who reports or returns the money, goods, etc. their spouse accepted.

1 Scope of Persons

A. Institutions (Public institutions)

The institutional scope subject to the act is the National Assembly, courts, Constitutional Court, election commissions, Board of Audit and Inspection, National Human Rights Commission, central administrative agencies and institutions affiliated therewith, and local governments and municipal and provincial education offices. It also includes public service-related organizations under Article 3-2 of the Public Service Ethics Act and organizations as prescribed under the Act on the Management of Public Institutions

Schools of various levels established under Early Childhood Education Act, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, Higher Education Act, and other Acts and subordinate statutes, as well as educational corporations incorporated under the Private School Act are included.

Media companies under Subparagraph 12 of Article 2 of the Act on Press Arbitration and Remedies, etc., for Damage Caused by Press Reports (broadcasting business operators, newspaper business operators, business operators publishing a periodical including a magazine, news communications business operators, online newspapers business operators) are included.

The term "business operators publishing a periodical including a magazine" means any person who publishes any magazine or other publications among periodical business operators defined in subparagraph 2 of Article 2 of the Act on Promotion of Periodicals, Including Magazines. This excludes persons who publish information or electronic publications (Subparagraph 7 of Article 2 of the Act on Arbitration and Remedies, etc., for Damage Caused by Press Reports).

B. Persons

Public officials mean civil servants under the State Public Officials Act or Local Public Officials Act, and persons deemed by other Acts as civil servants in terms of their appointment, service, guarantee of tenure and so on. Persons deemed by other Acts as civil servants include Judicial trainees (Article 72 of Court Organization Act), persons who serve as interns (Article 26-4 of State Public Officials Act), public health doctors (Article 3 of Act On The Special Measures For Public Health and Medical Services In Agricultural and Fishing Villages, etc.), registered security guards (Article 5 of Registered Security Guard Act).

Civil servants shall be classified as either public officials in career service (public officials in general service and public officials in special service) or public officials in non-career service (public officials in political service and Public officials in extraordinary civil service). Civil servants under the State Public Officials Act or the Local Public Officials Act are subject to the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act regardless of the kind of duties they perform.

The heads of public service-related organizations and their officers and employees mean heads of public service-related organizations under Article 3-2 of the Public Service Ethics Act and Organizations under Article 4 of the Act on the Management of Public Institutions, and their officers and employees. Officers including directors, auditors refer to both standing and non-standing officers, and the worker who signed a contract of employment with a public service-related organization is regarded as its employee regardless of the form of the contract and the duties they perform.

"Representative of a media company" means any person who has legal authority to represent the operation of a media company or any other person who has the same status as that person (Subparagraph 13 of Article 2 of the Act on Arbitration and Remedies, etc., for Damage Caused by Press Reports).

"Employee" refers to a worker who signed an employment contract with a public institution regardless of the form of the contract.

Since the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act does not provide an explicit scope of work for those who perform public duties, "public duties" refer to the entire range of duties performed by the public institution in question. As for media companies, not only the persons whose duties are reporting, commentary and news gathering but also those who handle administrative affairs and simple labor are subject to the Act.

However, when it comes to companies which publish company magazines as their secondary business and are classified as media companies (magazine and other periodical business operators), only those that publish periodicals are subject to the Act.

Private persons performing public duties are subject to the Act only with regard to their performance of public duties. "The head of the relevant agency" that they belong to could differ depending on the types of the private persons performing public duties.

Article 11 (Restriction on Actions related to Public Duties by Private Persons Performing Public Duties)

(2) Where Articles 5 through 9 apply mutatis mutandis to private persons performing public duties under paragraph (1), "public servant, etc." shall be construed as "private person performing public duties"; and "head of a/the relevant institution" shall be construed as "person who falls into any of the following categories":

Both Korean and foreign nationals are subject to the Act as long as their offense took place in a location where the Act applies.

If an employee of a legal person or an organization commits a violation, not only the violator but also the legal person or organization shall be subject to punishment in accordance with the joint penal provisions of the Act (Article 24)

C. Example case

A private elementary school teacher, A accepted cash and gift cards worth 4.6 million won after being requested by a parent, B to praise her child instead of scolding him even when he did not do his homework and to write nice comments on his transcript.

Schools subject to the Act refer to schools of various levels established under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, Higher Education Act, the Early Childhood Education Act and other Acts and subordinate statutes. And the principals and employees of those schools are regarded as public officials who are subject to the Act. A private elementary school falls into the category of the schools established under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, and its teacher, A is subject to the Act.

Since teacher A accepted cash and gift cards whose value exceeded 1 million won at a time, the teacher is punishable by imprisonment not exceeding three years and a fine not exceeding 30 million won.

Parent B is also punishable by imprisonment not exceeding three years and a fine not exceeding 30 million won since she offered cash and gift cards whose value exceeded 1 million won at a time.

2 Scope of Places

A. Legislative principles

The Improper Solicitation and Graft Act is applied to Korean and foreign nationals who committed a violation within the territory of the Republic of Korea (territorial principle). The territory of the Republic of Korea refers to the Korean peninsula and its annexed islands. If either an act of violation or its consequences take place within the territory, it shall be subject to the Act.

Judicial case: when a foreign national offered graft to a Korean public official in exchange for good offices and the act of offering graft took place in Korea but the act of rendering the good offices took place outside of the Korean territory, the violation shall be interpreted to have occurred within the Korean territory, and thus be subject to Subparagraph 1 of Article 90 of the former Attorney-at-Law Act under Article 2 of the Criminal Act (Supreme Court decision 99do3403, April 21, 2000).

The Act also applies to a foreign national who committed a violation on a Korean vessel or airplane even if it was outside of the Korean territory (flag state principle).

The Improper Solicitation and Graft Act is applied to a Korean national who committed a violation outside of the Korean territory (nationality principle). The Act also applies when a Korean public official accepts improper solicitation or graft from a foreign national outside of the Korean territory.

B. Example case (related to territorial principle)

Principal of a public elementary school, A received foreign liquor worth 500,000 won from a foreign national B who was a part-time language teacher with the request of allowing him/her to continue to work in the school in the following year.

A foreign national can be subject to an administrative fine if they committed a violation within the Korean territory.

Principal A falls into the category of public officials, etc. subject to the Act as he/she is the principal of a school established under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

Both A and B are subject to an administrative fine since principal A accepted graft of up to 1 million won from B in connection with his/her duties and a foreign national, B offered the graft. These acts of offering and accepting graft are related to the duties of the persons involved given that A is a principal of the school where the temporary teacher B works.

III. Duties of the State and
Public Institutions &
Duties of Public Officials, etc.

III

Duties of the State, Public Institutions and Public Officials, etc.Article 3 (Responsibility of the State, etc.)

- (1) The State shall endeavor to create working conditions in which public servants can perform their duties in a fair and disinterested manner.
- (2) Public institutions shall endeavor to create a public service culture in which improper solicitations and acceptance of money, goods, etc. are not tolerated, in order to ensure that public servants, etc. perform their duties in a fair and disinterested manner.
- (3) Public institutions shall create reasonable and appropriate protective measures in order to ensure that public servants, etc. will not be subject to any disadvantage for reporting a violation or taking any other action pursuant to this Act.

Article 4 (Obligations of Public Servants, etc.)

- (1) Public servants, etc. shall perform their duties in a fair and disinterested manner, without being influenced by their personal interests.
- (2) Public servants, etc. shall behave in a fair and impartial manner in performing their duties, and shall not favor or discriminate against any person related to their duties.

A. Characteristics of the duties performed by public officials, etc.

The duties public officials, etc. perform mostly have to do with the decision of public policies and their execution. Stakeholders tend to react sensitively because public policies have a real impact on their existing or newly created interests.

Public officials have the legal authority to exert substantial influence over various types of national affairs. The fact that there are always multiple actors involved makes it a constant challenge for public officials to maintain fairness in their performance of duties.

Given the nature of the duties performed by public officials, the roles and responsibilities of the state and public institutions are very important. The attitude of the public officials who carry out their duties is also important.

B. Duties of the state and public institutions

The state or public institutions should create working conditions that enable fair and honest job performance, and make efforts to cultivate a culture that does not tolerate improper solicitation and graft.

Public institutions are responsible to put appropriate protective measures in place to ensure that public officials will not be penalized for taking measures in accordance with this Act.

C. Duties of public officials. etc.

Due to the nature of the duties performed by public officials, a higher level of ethics and morality is required, and more restraint in personal life is desired. Without ensuring a sufficient level of ethics among public officials, it is hard to win the people's trust in public institutions and officials.

Efforts should be made not only by the state and public institutions but also by public officials to be fair and honest in their performance duties without being affected by personal interests. Public officials should act impartially in performing their duties and should not give favors to or discriminate against anyone related to their duties.

IV. Prohibition of Improper Solicitations, etc.

IV

Prohibition of Improper Solicitations, etc.1 Prohibition of Improper Solicitations*Article 5 (Prohibition of Improper Solicitations)

- (1) No person shall make any of the following improper solicitations to any public servant, etc. performing his/her duties, directly or through a third party:
1. Soliciting to process, in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes, such tasks as authorization, permission, license, patent, approval, inspection, qualification, test, certification, or verification, for which Acts and subordinate statutes (including Ordinances and Rules; hereinafter the same shall apply) prescribe requirements and which should be processed upon application by a duty-related party;
 2. Soliciting to mitigate or remit administrative dispositions or punishments such as cancellation of authorization or permission, and imposition of taxes, charges, administrative fines, penalty surcharges, charges for compelling compliance, penalties, or disciplinary actions, in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes;
 3. Soliciting to intervene or exert influence in the appointment, promotion, assignment or reassignment, or any other personnel matter with respect to any public servant, etc., in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes;
 4. Soliciting to select or reject a person, in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes, for a position which intervenes in the decision-making of a public institution, such as a member of various deliberation, decision-making, and arbitration committees, and a member of a committee for a test or screening administered by a public institution;
 5. Soliciting to select or reject a specific individual, organization, or juridical person, in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes, in any award, prize, or selection of outstanding institutions or persons, administered by a public institution;
 6. Soliciting to disclose, in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes, duty-related confidential information on tender, auction, development, examination, patent, military affairs, taxation, etc.;
 7. Soliciting to select or reject a specific individual, organization, or juridical person as a party to a contract, in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes governing contracts;
 8. Soliciting to intervene or exert influence so that subsidies, incentives, contributions, investments, grants, funds, etc., are assigned to, provided to, invested in, deposited in, lent to, contributed to, or financed to a specific individual, organization, or juridical person, in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes;
 9. Soliciting to allow a specific individual, organization, or juridical person to buy, exchange, use, benefit from, or possess goods and services that are produced, supplied, or managed by public institutions, at prices different from what is prescribed by Acts or subordinate statutes, or against normal transaction practices;

10. Soliciting to process or manipulate affairs of schools of each level, such as admission, grades, or performance tests, in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes;
11. Soliciting to process affairs related to military service, such as physical examination for conscription, assignment to a military unit, or appointment to a position, in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes;
12. Soliciting to conduct various assessments or judgements implemented by public institutions, or manipulate the results thereof, in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes;
13. Soliciting to make a specific individual, organization, or juridical person subject to or exempt from administrative guidance, enforcement activities, audit, or investigation; to manipulate the outcome thereof; or to ignore any illegality, in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes;
14. Soliciting to process investigation of a case, trial, adjudication, decision, mediation, arbitration, reconciliation, or other equivalent affairs, in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes;
15. Soliciting a public servant, etc. to act beyond the limits of his/her position and authority granted by Acts or subordinate statutes, or to take any action for which he/she lacks legitimate authority, regarding any and all affairs that may be the subject-matter of improper solicitation as prescribed by subparagraphs 1 through 14.

A. Overview

Although the widespread practices of solicitation associated with nepotism/paternalism is a major cause of corruption in our society, the institutional arrangements to regulate corruption have been insufficient. Unlike the Criminal Act, the Attorney-at-Law Act, the Act on Aggregated Punishment of Specific Crimes which regulate solicitation that involves graft, the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act regulates the act of improper solicitation per se.

Improper solicitation refers to "violating the law" or "abusing one's position/power" in handling the 14 duties listed in the Act. Among them, Improper solicitation related to goods and services by public institutions refers to a situation where the goods and services are traded beyond the monetary value prescribed by law or against normal transaction practices.

The Act enumerates the types of improper solicitation related to the 14 listed duties in the corruption-prone areas to provide clearer criteria for improper solicitation.

The Improper Solicitation and Graft Act prohibits improper solicitation per se regardless of whether improper solicitation affected public officials' performance of duties. In other words, even if the public official who was improperly solicited did not perform his or her duties under the solicitation, the person who made the solicitation is subject to sanctions.

Note

Cases of domestic and foreign legislation that sanctions improper solicitation per se

Domestic cases

◆ An increasing number of laws sanction the act of solicitation per se regardless of whether financial benefits are involved or not

- A retiree who requested an unfair favor or assistance from an incumbent of an agency to which he or she belonged before his or her retirement shall be subject to imprisonment not exceeding one year or a fine not exceeding 10 million won (Article 18-4, Article 29 of the Public Service Ethics Act).
- Any person who solicits a juror or an alternate juror to grant a favor in connection with his/her duties shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding two years or by a fine not exceeding 5 million won (Article 56 of the Act on Citizen Participation in Criminal Trials).
- A person who receives or induces another person to receive a solicitation shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding five years or a fine not exceeding 2.5 million won (Article 100 of the National Referendum Act).

Overseas cases

◆ OECD countries also strictly prohibit solicitation regardless of whether financial benefits are involved and any act that influences public officials' performance of duties.

- A person who privately addresses to any public servant who has or will have official discretion in a judicial or administrative proceeding any representation, entreaty, argument, or other communication designed to influence the outcome on the basis of considerations other than those authorized by law purposely or knowingly shall be fined not to exceed $50,000 or be imprisoned for a term not to exceed 10 years, or both (The Montana Code Annotated, U.S.).
- A person who privately addresses to any public servant who has or will have official discretion in a judicial or administrative proceeding any representation, entreaty, argument, or other communication designed to influence the outcome on the basis of considerations other than those authorized by law purposely or knowingly shall be fined not to exceed $2,000 or be imprisoned for a term not to exceed one year, or both (Maine Criminal Code, U.S.).

- The public officials who believes he or she is being required to act in a way that is unlawful, improper and unethical should report the matter to the relevant head of the public service and the head of the public service should make public disclosure of the matter (EU Model Code of Conduct for Public Officials).

B. The Person Engaging in Improper Solicitation

“No person“ is allowed for direct or third-party improper solicitation related to the 14 duties listed in the Act (Paragraph 1 of Article 5 of the Act).

Since the scope of “person“ is limited to individuals who can actually engage in solicitation, only a natural person fall into the category, excluding a legal person that have to solicit through a natural person. If an employee (natural person) of a corporation commits a violation, the corporation shall be subject to punishment in accordance with the joint penal provisions of the Act (Article 24).

C. The Counterpart of Improper Solicitation

(1) The need to define the counterpart and the scope of improper solicitation

Improper solicitation refers to acts of solicitation that make “public officials in duty“ perform the 14 duties listed in the Act in the way that violates the law directly or through a third party. The counterpart of improper solicitation includes "public officials performing 14 duties" listed in the Act.

When solicited for the first time, a “public official performing duties“ must show clear signs of rejection, and if asked again with identical improper solicitation the official is bound to report. It is to protect honest public officials who followed proper report procedure from the responsibility that might be imposed on them ex post facto.

However, if a public official fails to report the recurrence of the identical improper solicitation, the public official shall be subject to punishment.

(2) The scope of public officials performing their duties

“Officials performing their duties” include not only the officials handling the duty but also managers and directors with approval authority. If the authority is delegated in accordance with internal policy on delegation of authority, it also includes heads of organizations who have the right to command and supervise albeit without approval authority. Even if the authority is delegated in accordance with internal policy, the head of an organization still keeps the title. Thus if the head is improperly solicited on delegated duties, he or she should also be obligated to show rejection and report in line with the purpose of the Act.

In case the improperly solicited senior public officials without approval authority but with the right to command and supervise direct junior officials for implementation, the senior public official shall be subject to criminal punishment since he/she falls into the category of officials performing their duties, and the direction per se is a duty susceptible to improper solicitation.

Since the senior public official's direction is improper solicitation for a third party, a junior official must show clear signs of rejection, and shall be subject to criminal punishment for performing a duty as directed by improper solicitation if he/she followed the direction knowing that it is improper solicitation for a third party.

However, public officials with the position or authority which may exert de facto influence do not fall into the category of officials performing their duties. The scope of mandatory report may be too extensive if they are included.

Public officials with the position or authority which may exert de facto influence shall be subject to an administrative fine for improper solicitation for a third-party if they deliver the solicitation to officials performing their duties.

(3) Example case

A local government head, B is asked by a public official A to change his evaluation ranking, and gives an order to evaluator C to change A's rankings and to make a new ranking list although the list and rankings on evaluated officials are set by the relevant legislative procedure.

Duties related to personnel management including recruitment and promotion of public officials is one of the duties susceptible to improper solicitation under the Act.

Intervening or exerting influence on personal matters of public officials in the way that violates laws such as Local Public Officials Act, Local Public Officials Appointment Decree, Local Public Officials Evaluation Rules is improper solicitation.

A local government head, B is subject to criminal punishment for carrying out duties susceptible to improper solicitation, since B is a public official performing duties and has the right to command and supervise evaluator C. Public officials performing duties susceptible to improper solicitation include not only those who handles the duties directly but also managers, directors and other officials with approval authority as well as heads of organizations with the rights to command and supervise.

Since the order by local government head B is also improper solicitation for a third party, evaluator C must show clear signs of rejection, and shall be subject to criminal punishment for performing a duty as directed by improper solicitation if the official followed direction knowing that it is improper solicitation for a third party.

Public official A made solicitation for him or herself, and is excluded from administrative fines, but is subject to a disciplinary action for violating the Act (Article 5).

Article 5 (Prohibition of Improper Solicitations)

(1) No person shall make any of the following improper solicitations to any public servant, etc. performing his/her duties, directly or through a third party.

D. Types of Beneficiaries for Improper Solicitation

(1) The meaning of direct solicitation

No one shall solicit any public official, etc. performing his or her duties “directly or through a third party“ to do any improper acts. However, improper solicitation for oneself does not result in an administrative fine even though the act is prohibited.

Therefore it is important to differentiate improper solicitations through (for) a third party, which are subject to an administrative fine, from improper solicitations by oneself, which is not subject to an administrative fine.

"Improper solicitations by oneself" which is not subject to an administrative fine, indicates that legal effects (advantages·disadvantages) are vested in oneself. If the advantages or disadvantages vested in oneself is indirect, or virtual/reflective, it becomes solicitation for a third party. For example, a solicitation to eliminate a specific person from a contracting party by violating relevant laws is a solicitation for a third party since the effect (disadvantage) is not vested in the solicitor.

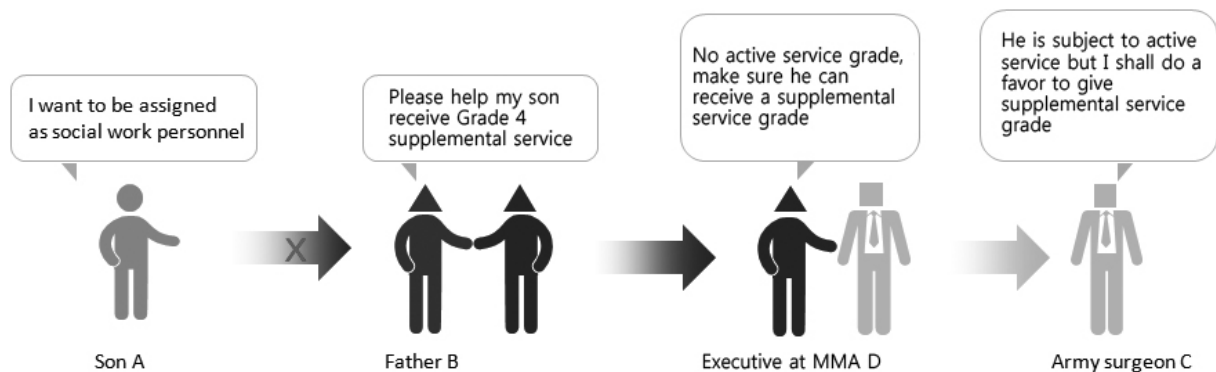

(2) Improper solicitation for family members

Whether it is a solicitation for a third party

Improper solicitation for family members including parents and children fall into the category of solicitation for a third party since the effects (advantages·disadvantages) are vested in family members, who are third parties. Here, the fact that the children is a minor or an adult is not a subject of question.

Example cases

#1. B wanted his son to get Grade 4 supplemental service from conscription examination and be able to serve as a civil worker at a social welfare center in Seoul. Without letting his son know, B solicited his close acquaintance D, who was an executive at Military Manpower Administration, to ask army surgeon C at the conscription examination center to give his son Grade 4.

Duties related to conscription examination (physical grade evaluation) is one of the duties susceptible to improper solicitation under the Act (Article 5 (1) 11). Violating the physical grade evaluation under military service laws and soliciting for Grade 4 alternative service is improper solicitation.

The father B who engaged in improper solicitation for his son A, who is a third party, is subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 20 million won. In other words, since the effect (advantage) of B's solicitation is directly vested in his son A, a third party, it is categorized as improper solicitation for a third party.

Since father B solicited without A's knowledge and A did not engage in improper solicitation through B, A is not subject to sanctions.

Executive D at Military Manpower Administration is subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 30 million won as he is a public official who engaged in improper solicitation for the third party A.

If army surgeon C showed clear signs of rejection when he was first asked of a favor, he is to be exempted from disciplinary actions and penalty. However, if the army surgeon C is requested of identical improper solicitation again, he is bound to report to the head of the organization, and the failure to do so will make him subject to disciplinary actions.

If army surgeon C gave Grade 4 alternative service in response to improper solicitation by executive D of Military Manpower Administration, he is subject to criminal punishment (imprisonment not exceeding two years or a fine not exceeding 20 million won).

#2. B's mother A applied for long-term care service for the elderly. Knowing that his mother A does not meet the requirements stipulated on the enforcement decree of the Act on Long-Term Care Insurance for the Aged, B solicited public official C for the Long-Term Care Insurance to include A in the service, without A's knowledge.

Duties related to selection of Long-Term Care Insurance for the Aged is one of the duties susceptible to improper solicitation under the Act (Article 5 (1) 1).

Violating the Act on Long-Term Care Insurance for the Aged and including a person who does not fulfill the requirements in the list of the insured is improper solicitation.

Having engaged in improper solicitation for his mother, who is a third party, her son, B, is subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 20 million won. Since the effect (advantage) of B's solicitation is directly vested in his mother, a third party, it is categorized as improper solicitation for a third party.

(3) Improper solicitation by an employee of a legal person in relation to his/her duties

Whether it is a solicitation for a third party

For a legal person that cannot engage in solicitation, it is an issue whether the improper solicitation made by an employee in relation to his or her duties is a solicitation for a third party or not.

A legal person and its employees are independent in terms of their rights and obligations. Solicitation by employees (including those with representative authority) is for the legal person, and since the effect is vested in the legal person, it falls under the category of solicitation for a third party. Improper solicitation by employees is not considered acts performed by the legal person. According to judicial precedents, criminal actions of employees are not considered those of a legal person. If the improper solicitation of employees is always considered to be for him or herself, the legal person is always excluded from sanctions, going against the purpose of legislation.

An administrative fine imposed on an employee who engaged in improper solicitation in relation to his/her duties

If employees of a legal person violated the Act in relation to his or her duties and is subject to an administrative fine,

- An employee is subject to an administrative fine in accordance with penalty clauses for violation of the obligation to prohibit improper solicitation and bribery.
- A legal person is subject to an administrative fine in accordance with the joint penal provisions of the Act (Article 24).

Example case

Employee of ○○ construction company, A solicited public official C at a district office to grant a building permit, violating construction laws.

Duties related to building permit is one of the duties susceptible to improper solicitation under the Act (Article 5 (1) 1).

Requesting for a building permit against construction laws is improper solicitation. Improper solicitation by an employee is for the benefit of a legal person, and it corresponds to improper solicitation for a third party since its effect is vested in the legal person.

Employee A is subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 20 million won for engaging in improper solicitation for the legal person, which is a third party.

In accordance with the joint penal provisions of the Act (Article 24), ○○ construction company is subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 20 million won. However, the company may be exempted from responsibility if it had actively taken responsibility for due diligence and supervision to prevent any violations by its employees.

E. Requirements for Improper Solicitation

(1) Violation of Acts and statutes

Scope of Acts and statutes

"Violation of Acts and statutes" which is the requirement for improper solicitation, includes "laws, Presidential decree, ordinance of the Prime Minister, and Ministerial ordinance".

Acts and statutes include not only individual Acts relevant to the duties susceptible to improper solicitation, but also general Acts including State Public Official Act, Local Public Officials Act, and Criminal Act. It also includes procedures Acts, such as litigation acts, Administrative Appeals Act, Administrative Procedures Act, and Non-Contentious Case Procedure Act. Solicitation to grant a building permit without any assessment of impact on the traffic, or to grant all sorts of business permits without a hearing, and so on will be subject to the law since it violates one of the procedure.

If the specific standard is set by notifications and directives delegated by or based on upper laws, the violation of the standard stipulated in notifications and directives may correspond to the violation of upper laws.

According to judicial precedents, Regulation on Overall Property Tax (86Nu484), Local Government Head's Notification on LPG Sales Business Permission (2000Du7933) were regarded as externally binding legal orders, complementing the upper laws.

Rules to regulate the administrative organization internally are not included in Acts and statutes.

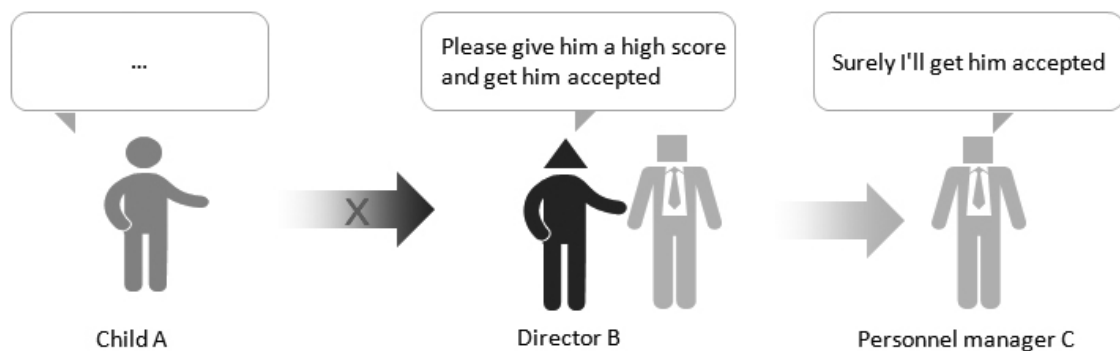

However, if the violation of rules lead to the violation of upper laws, then it becomes a violation of Acts and statutes.

General legal principles including the principle of proportionality and the principle of good faith may be the standard for interpretation and application of individual Acts and statutes. However, such general legal principals alone cannot be the standard for determining whether Acts and statutes are violated.

Rules that are included in Acts and statutes refer to the rules enacted by heads of local governments under Article 23 of the Local Autonomy Act.

Example case

#1. A, a child of Director B of a central ministry, entered for a closed competitive examination for service as a lawyer conducted by ○○ local government. Director B secretly solicited manager C, who went in as an interviewer, to give a high score to his child for recruitment. Manager C gave a high score at the interview and A got accepted.

Duties related to personnel management including recruitment of public officials is one of the duties susceptible to improper solicitation under the Act (Article 5 (1) 3).

An act of intervening or exerting influence on personal matters of public officials to violate laws including Local Public Officials Act is improper solicitation.

"Violation of Acts and statutes" include violations of not only individual Acts relevant to the duties susceptible to improper solicitation, but also general Acts including State Public Official Act, Local Public Officials Act, and Criminal Act.

Local Public Officials Act

Article 42 (Prohibition of Act Interfering with Examination or Appointment)

No person shall intentionally commit any act interfering with, or exerting any unjustifiable influence on, any examination or appointment.

Article 43 (Prohibition of Malpractice concerning Personnel Affairs)

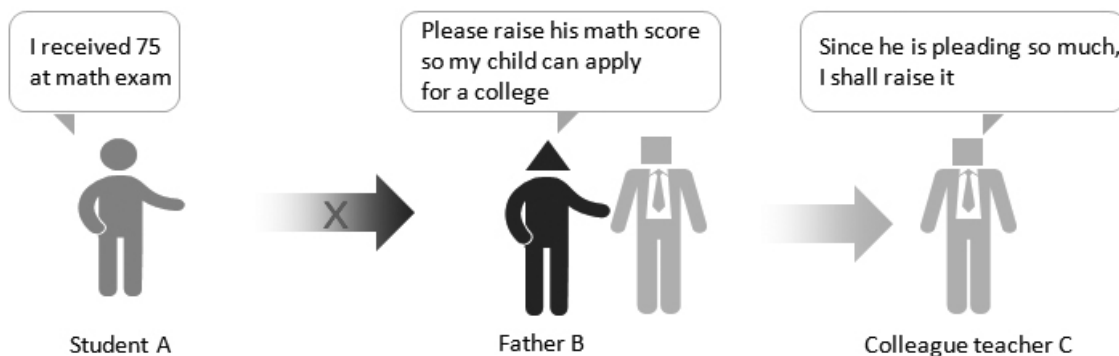

No person shall make any false or unlawful statement, record, certification, grading or report on any selection examination, promotion, appointment, or any other personnel records.

Director B is subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 30 million won since he engaged in improper solicitation for a third party A at his own discretion. The fact that he is a public official aggravated the punishment. Since the effect (advantage) of B's solicitation is directly vested in his child A, a third party, it is categorized as improper solicitation for a third party.

Since child A did not request for improper solicitation directly or through a third party, A is not a subject to sanctions.

Manager C is subject to criminal punishment (imprisonment not exceeding two years or a fine not exceeding 20 million won) since he/she hired director B's child A by giving high interview scores as B solicited.

#2. A, who is Grade 12 student at OO high school got the score of 75 in the final exam for math. A's father B, who was a Korean language teacher asked A's math teacher C to raise A's scores for better school records, without A's knowledge.

Duties related to school records is one of the duties susceptible to improper solicitation under the Act (Article 5 (1) 10).

Solicitation to improve school records is an improper solicitation as well as a violation of Paragraph 1 of Article 314 of the Criminal Act (Interference on business). "Violation of Acts and statutes" include violations of not only individual Acts relevant to the duties susceptible to improper solicitation, but also general Acts including Criminal Act. Solicitation to improve school records makes the other party to commit the crime of interference on business under the Criminal Act, thus it is against the socially accepted rules.

In a case where a father who is a high school teacher asked a fellow teacher who handles school records to falsify his daughter's record, the court convicted the father of obstruction of performance of official duties of the principal under the Criminal Act. (Ulsan District Court, 2014Godan899, June 13, 2014)

Father B is subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 30 million won since he engaged in improper solicitation for his daughter who is a third party. The fact that he is a public official aggravated the punishment. Since the effect (advantage) of B's solicitation is directly vested in his child A, a third party, it is categorized as improper solicitation for a third party.

Fellow teacher C is subject to criminal punishment (imprisonment not exceeding 2 years or a fine not exceeding 20 million won) since he improved A's school record as B improperly solicited.

Since A did not request for improper solicitation directly or through a third party, A is not a subject to sanctions.

#3. A, who is to run a restaurant with a size of 100m², reported to public official C that his restaurant will install waste water treatment facilities of 5m³/day. However, although the capacity of waste water treatment facilities at his restaurant is short of the standard stipulated in Sewerage Act, A asked his friend B, who is a public official for local taxes, to solicit public official C to accept his installation report of waste water treatment facilities.

Duties related to waste water facilities installation is one of the duties susceptible to improper solicitation under the Act (Article 5 (1) 1).

A request for a public official to proceed installation report for waste water treatment facilities in violation of installation standards under the Sewerage Act is considered as improper solicitation in violation of Acts and statutes.

The violation of “The calculation method to determine the number of people that produce waste water and use septic tank depending on the use of building (Ministry of Environment Notification #2015-133)” enacted by the Sewerage Act and its enforcement decree is considered as violation of Acts and statutes.

According to the notification, a restaurant with the size of 100m² must install waste water treatment facilities with treatment capacity of 7m³/day.

Enforcement Decree of the Sewerage Act

Article 24 (Installation of individual waste water processing facilities) ⑤ The Minister of Environment will notify the standard for waste water generation to be used for the installation of individual waste water processing in Paragraph 2 to 4.

The calculation method to determine the number of people that produce waste water and use septic tank depending on the use of building (Ministry of Environment Notification #2015-133)

<The calculation method to determine the number of people that produce waste water and use septic tank depending on the use of building>

#	Use of building			Amount of waste water			Use of septic tank
				Daily production of waste water	BOD (mg/L)	Note	Calculation formula	Note
3	Sales and business facilities	Restaurant	General restaurant	70l/m ²	550	Chinese food	N= 0.175A	-
					330	Korean food, snack
					200	Japanese food, bar, pub, buffet
					150	Western food

Petitioner A is a stakeholder of the report for waste water treatment facilities who requested for improper solicitation through B, a third party, and is subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 10 million won.

Public official B improperly solicited for petitioner A, who is a third party, and the fact that he is a public official aggravates sanctions against him. He is subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 30 million won.

If public official C clearly expresses a intention of rejection when he is first requested of improper solicitation from friend B, he is exempted from disciplinary actions and punishment. If public official C receives identical improper solicitation again, he has the obligation to report to his head, and is subject to disciplinary actions if he fails to report. However, if public official C accepted the installation report of waste water treatment facilities in response to his friend B's improper solicitation, C is subject to criminal punishment (imprisonment not exceeding two years or a fine not exceeding 20 million won).

The meaning of "in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes governing contracts"

In terms of improper solicitation regarding the selection or rejection of the contract party (Subparagraph 7), the subparagraph places limits on the scope of Acts by saying "in violation of Acts or subordinate statutes governing contracts." As long as there is the modifier, "governing contracts," the scope of Acts should be limited in its interpretation.

Acts related to contracts refer not only the Acts to be specifically enacted to regulate contracts, such as the Act on Contracts to which the State is a Party, but also contract relevant provisions in individual Acts. For the latter's example, Workers Vocational Skills Development Act has consigned contract provisions for vocational ability development training.

Furthermore, if a public official is involved, then relevant acts also include general Acts including the State Public Officials Act and procedure Acts that public officials must abide by when carrying out jobs related to contracts.

(2) Deviation from normal transaction practices

The meaning and judgment standard for "normal transaction practices"

Unlike other types of improper solicitation, when it comes to goods and services of public institutions, "normal transaction practices" are the standards for determining whether or not a certain act constitutes improper solicitation. This is because there are no set concrete actions in most Acts with regard to transactions of goods and services of public institutions.

"Normal transaction practices" indicate the usual practices that would have taken place if there were no improper solicitation. Deviation from normal transaction practices is determined comprehensively by the intention and purpose of the actions, the nature of goods and services, the position and relationship of the parties involved, the damage done unto the other party, as well as internal standards and regulations of public institutions.

Favors given to a particular person by violating internal standards and regulations of a public institution without a particular reason is considered a practice deviant from normal ones.

Example case

A tried to register himself for hospitalization at ○○ National Hospital, but he was at the end of the list. A asked his friend B, who is a friend of the hospital's head of administration, C, to admit him first. C changed the list and facilitated A to be hospitalized ahead of others.

Duties related to hospitalization, which is a service that national university-affiliated hospitals are responsible for, is one of the duties susceptible to improper solicitation under the Act (Article 5 (1) 9). National university-affiliated hospital is a public service-related organization and is part of an incorporated educational institution, and is therefore a public institution.

Violating internal standards and regulations of public institutions to give preference to a particular person is improper solicitation that deviates from normal practices. The normal practice for hospitalization is admitting patients in the order of registration except for special circumstances.

A engaged in improper solicitation through his friend B, who is a third party, and is therefore subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 10 million won.

A's friend B engaged in improper solicitation for his friend A, who is a third party, and is therefore subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 20 million won.

Head of administration C changed the registration list in response to B's improper solicitation and allowed A to get a medical examination ahead of others, and is therefore subject to criminal punishment (imprisonment not exceeding two years, or a fine not exceeding 20 million won).

Note

Legislation cases of normal transaction practices

"Normal transaction practices" are stipulated as the basis for judgment in Acts including Franchise Business Act and Fair Trade Act.

Fair Transactions in Franchise Business Act

Article 12-3 (Prohibition of Unfair Restrictions on Business Hours)

(1) No franchiser shall perform an unfair act of restricting business hours of a franchisee (hereinafter referred to as "unfair restrictions on business hours") in the light of normal transaction practices.

Monopoly Regulation and Fair Trade Act

Article 23-2 (Prohibition of Provision of Inappropriate Benefit to Person with Special Interest)

(1) No company that belongs to an enterprise group falling under the standards prescribed by Presidential Decree, such as the total amount of assets not less than a fixed size, may devolve any inappropriate benefit on a person with special interest (limited to the same person and his/her relatives; hereafter the same shall apply in this Article) or on any affiliate company in which the person with special interest holds stocks of not less than the proportion of stocks determined by Presidential Decree, by conducting any of the following acts. In such cases, the categories or standards for the following acts shall be determined by Presidential Decree:

1. Conducting a transaction under the terms that are substantially favorable compared with the terms that have been applied, or judged to be applicable to normal transactions;

According to legal precedents, common practices in the Fair Trade Act are to be determined in consideration of the intention and purpose of the actions, effect and impact, the business situation, the position of the trader, disadvantages of the counterpart and more.

2 Duties subject to improper solicitation

A. Improper solicitations regarding the handling of authorization, permission, or other duties (Subparagraph 1)

It refers to the handling of duties in violation of the relevant acts and subordinate statutes upon receiving an application from a duty-related party as prescribed by the relevant acts and subordinate statutes.

A. Overview

Paragraph 1 of Article 5 of this act lists specific prohibited solicitations including the handling of 14 types of duties in violation of various acts and subordinate statutes. Paragraph 2 lists 7 types of cases to which the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act is not applicable. In case where an act meets the requirement in any of the item in Paragraph 2, the act does not constitute an improper solicitation.

The relation between Paragraph 1 of Article 5 of the this Act (prohibition clause), and Paragraph 2 (exception clause) raises a problem which is related to the question of how the scope of exception should be interpreted.

Since the association between Paragraph 2 and Paragraph 1 is undeniable judging from the expression 'Notwithstanding the provisions of Paragraph (1),' the scope of exception is required to be interpreted in a rational manner.

Given the association between Paragraphs 1 and 2, if an act meets the formal requirement of the causes for exception set forth in Paragraph 2, notwithstanding the fact that the matter constitute an improper solicitation prohibited in Paragraph 1, it may constitute a cause for exception.

B. Requests in Accordance with the Procedures or Methods Prescribed by any Acts and Subordinate Statutes or Standards (Subparagraph 1)

The expression stipulates the most typical method of communication that is already institutionalized and that people and public institutions use pursuant to the relevant acts, subordinate statutes, and standards.

Any public institutions may establish a communication channel or system between a public official and any petitioner, under its internal standards. This channel or system is to prevent any oppression in the public institutions' communication such as any public official avoiding counsel with a civil petitioner.

The problem remains concerning whether the causes for exception in Subparagraph 1 requires that both the formal requirements (procedures and methods set forth in relevant acts and subordinate statutes) and the actual requirements (lawful contents). In other words, the problem lies in whether any act prohibited by Paragraph 1 can be allowed if it fulfills the formal requirements (procedures and methods set forth in relevant acts and subordinate statutes).

In case the formal requirements are met, a cause for exception is constituted even if the content of the solicitation contains improper elements. The clause, "demanding particular action such as relief or settlement of infringement on rights ... or suggesting or proposing enactment, amendment, or rescission of any Act, subordinate statute, or standards" does not limit its contents.

Demanding the fulfillment of both the formal and actual requirements may diminish its function as a cause for exception under Paragraph 1 and oppress communication in public institutions.

Even if a matter violates any acts and subordinate statutes, civil petitioners who may feel that the existing acts and subordinate statutes do not provide enough protection of his or her civil rights may require opportunities to request such a matter.

C. Public solicitation of a certain action (Subparagraph 2)

Since improper solicitations assume secrecy, requests made 'publicly' and not in secrecy constitute exception to improper solicitation. This means open request for certain action (openness of an action's circumstance).

In case a matter is requested publicly, because the matter become public, it functions as an autonomous regulating tool to all relevant parties including the petitioner and public officials. To make a matter open to unspecified individuals enables them to take control over the matter with various opinions to be collected on the way, and eventually leading to a reasonable conclusion.

'Publicly' means to put the request in a situation where it is noticed by unspecified individuals. Public requests include picketing in an open space, and requests via the media such as television networks or a newspapers.

Any request that meets the formal requirements (to be requested 'publicly') establishes a cause for exception regardless of its content. The cause for exception in Subparagraph 2 only set forth the formal requirements but not specifically the actual requirements (the content).

D. Conveying of complaints and grievances for the public interest (Subparagraph 3)

Requirements of a cause for exception

Subparagraph 3 stipulates the causes for exception that limit the subject (an elected public official, political party, civil society organization etc.), objective (for the public interest), object of an action (complaints and grievances), and the action itself (conveying).

Subject: subjects in the exception clause are expressed as "an elected public official, political party, civil society organization, etc.," where other subjects that can be included as "etc." can be a problem.

Unlike other causes for exception, the scope of this cause needs to be determined after taking account of its legislative purport, the function and characteristics of those subjects presented as examples.

Others represented in "etc." are limited to organizations that seek public interests and can collect opinions of the public equivalent to the "public official, political party, civil society organization."

Other causes for exception (requests in accordance with the procedures and methods prescribed by Acts and subordinate statutes, requests solicited publicly, social norms, etc.) may be applied to other organizations or individuals.

Exceptional organizations may include occupation associations, interest groups, and officially approved academic societies and other associations.

Since the causes for exception such as objective (for the public interest), action (of conveying) are also limited, there is no need for a too narrow interpretation of the scope of the civil society organizations.

However, the person representing the organization in question should convey on behalf of the organization, and cases where the matter is conveyed by any of its individual employees or members shall be excluded.

Objective: it includes matters pertaining to the interests of specific social organizations or of all of their members, along with the interests of a population of the state or society.

Public interest as the main objective is enough to constitute this cause. Even if it is a complaint or grievance filed by a specific third party, it may constitute the public interest objective when the matter is or may be pertinent to the interests of the majority.

Object: complaint or grievance that is the object to be conveyed, refers to complaints pertinent to matters that violate a citizen's rights or cause inconvenience or imposition.

Act on Anti-Corruption and the Establishment and Operation of the Anti-Corruption & Civil Rights Commission

Article 2 (Definitions)

5. The term "complaint" means any complaint on any illegal, unjustifiable or passive action of an administrative agency, etc. (including an actual act and omission) or unreasonable administrative system which violates a citizen's right or causes inconvenience or burden to a citizen.

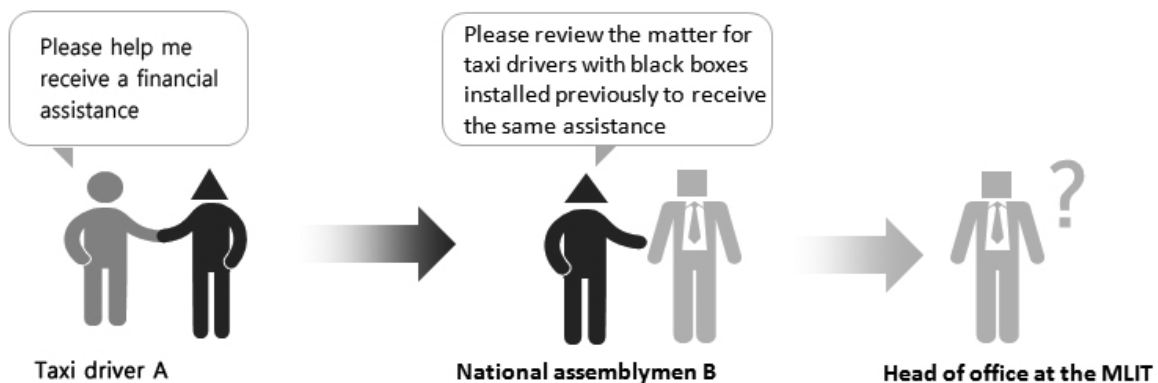

It also includes motion or proposal for the enactment, amendment, abolition of any Acts, subordinate statutes, and standards, or the improvement of policy projects and its management.

Action: conveying means everything received is delivered in principal as it is. But it also includes conveying the matter with a few supplementations made and without fundamental changes to its contents. A matter to which fundamental changes are made beyond simple conveying or supplementation constitutes a separate new solicitation.

Example cases

Example case 1 (case for public interest objective)

Although an amendment to the Traffic Safety Act is in effect to provide financial assistance regarding the installation of a black box (electronic event data recorder) in taxis vehicles, those that had their black boxes already installed before the act took effect are not eligible for such assistance. As such, a taxi driver A, who had his black box installed in his vehicle prior to the amendment of the Act, filed a complaint to the relevant head of office at the Ministry of Land, Infrastructure and Transport via a national assemblymen B who happens to be a member of the Land, Infrastructure and Transport Committee, which allows taxicab owners who had their black boxes installed before the Act was amended to be provided with the same financial assistance.

The case constitutes an exception to improper solicitation as it involves a complaint of grievance filed by a third party that was conveyed with public interests in mind.

Example case 2 (case against public interest objective)

A subsidy was granted to A, who operates a child-care center, after she solicited C, the public official in charge of the subsidy duties at the local government, for making her institution that is not qualified to become eligible for the assistance via a local council member B,

The duties of subsidy allocation and provision constitute those prohibited as improper solicitations under the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act (Article 5 (1) 8).

Requesting for making any individual or organization eligible for subsidy grant in violation of any relevant subsidy-related acts and subordinate statutes constitutes an act of improper solicitation.

The case meets the subject, object, and action requirements as an elected public official, the local council member B, has conveyed the complaint of grievance to the public official.

However, the case may not be deemed to have an objective of public interest, since requesting for subsidy when someone is not eligible is an action, benefiting a specific person.

E. Request for the completion of a duty within statutory deadline, etc. (Subparagraphs 4, 5, 6)

Also excepted are requests for the completion of a duty within a statutory deadline, inquiry or verification request about its progress or results.

Actions such as applying or making a request for verification or certification of a certain duty or juristic relations, requesting explanation or interpretation of systems, procedures or Acts and subordinate statutes related to a certain duty in a form of inquiry or consultation are also excluded.

F. Conducts recognized to be consistent with social rules and norms (Subparagraph 7)

Even if an action conforms to one of the fourteen types of improper solicitations, it is still immune from punishment when it is justified in the context of the overall legal order.

In a fast-changing complex society, it is technically impossible to stipulate in detail all cases that are allowed by the social rules and norms. The use of an indeterminate term that can encompass a wide range of cases was inevitable for the legislation.

Conducts recognized to be consistent with social rules and norms refer to actions that may be approved by the public in the context of the overall legal order, or the social ethics and the socially accepted ideas behind it.

Legislative case: the concept of 'social norms (or rules)' is already employed in Article 20 of the Criminal Act, Article 5 of the Act on Press Arbitration and Remedies, etc. for Damage Caused by Press Reports and other provisions that set forth requirements for actions immune from punishment.

Decision shall be made after considering all relevant contents and formalities of a solicitation including its motive, objective, content, fairness in the public official's undertaking of the duty, and means or methods used.

Judicial case: Because any action's legitimacy as an act that is in line with the social norms not constituting any offenses should be determined after teleological and rational deliberation of the matter in its specific context, for its legitimacy to be approved, the following requirements need to be fulfilled among others: 1) legitimacy in the motive or objective of the action, 2) reasonability of the means or methods of the action, 3) the balance of legal benefits between the interest of protection and violation, 4) urgency, and 5) the action's supplementary nature which suggests that no other means or methods that the action in question was available (Supreme Court decision 2003Do3000, September 26, 2003).

Note

Summary of court precedents related to the constitution of improper solicitation in offences of misappropriation, acceptance or giving of property

The meaning of improper solicitation in offences of misappropriation, acceptance or giving of any property is as follows:

The court found that improper solicitation in offences of misappropriation, acceptance or giving of any property is defined as a solicitation that is against the social norms and the principles of good faith.

Judicial case: Improper solicitation in offences of misappropriation, acceptance or giving of any property refers to a solicitation against the social norms and the principles of good faith, the decision of which shall be made in consideration of a broad range of factors including the content thereof, the form of and amount in property delivered or offered in connection with the matter, and the integrity of the person who handled the duty as interest protected by laws, and shall not require to be explicit (Supreme Court decision 96Do837, June 9, 1998).

The court found that legitimate performance of one's duty, simple request for favorable handling and convenience, and request for the claiming of one's rights do not constitute improper solicitation.

Legitimate performance of duties

For the defendant, a local union head at a farmers co-operative society, attracting deposits in the interest of the society constitutes solicitation for deposits as the defendant's legitimate duty (Supreme Court decision 79Do708, June 12, 1979).

Simple request for favorable handling and convenience

Case 1: the simple request co-defendants A and B have made to a third defendant C (bank clerk) asking C for a favorable handling of ○○ textile company's financial support for export within the limits allowed by the relevant regulations may not constitute an improper solicitation in violation of the social norms (Supreme Court decision 82Do1656, September 28, 1982).

Case 2: the request made to the defendant A (an assistant manager at a bank), who is in charge of the technology reviews for loan approvals, and defendant B (another assistant manager at the bank), who is in charge of the progressive payments for the loans of related funds, for the smooth handling of the subject matter etc., while providing all the convenience available within the limits of their own duties, does not constitute an illegal or improper request (Supreme Court decision 79Do3108, April 8, 1980).

Request for the claiming of one's rights

Case 1: when A, who entered into a sales agreement with a third party to dispose of a parcel of real estate that he believed was in his possession, made B, who represents the clan union, which had sought to execute the court's temporary measure decision to prohibit sales asserting its right over the property, withdrew the execution and paid for the expenses incurred from the temporary measure application procedure, such action may be deemed as an action to claim his own right and shall not constitute an improper solicitation in violation of the social norms or the principle of good faith (Supreme Court decision 80Do19, August 26, 1980).

Case 2: when A, the CEO of ○○corporation who entered into a garbage collection contract with the garbage disposal company, B corporation for a monthly collection fee of 750,000 won, received a proposal from B corporation's competitor C corporation of a garbage collection service for the monthly collection fee of 600,000 won, and A notified the revocation of their contract to B corporation that fulfilled all of its obligations under the contract, and where D, the CEO at B corporation, requested A "not to terminate their contract for an additional amount of 3 million won," such request to claim its existing rights by maintaining the contractual relationship may not be construed as an improper solicitation (Supreme Court decision 85Do465, October 22, 1985).

Requests for preferential treatment, preferential adoption/selection or unlawful/improper handling constitute improper solicitations according to precedents.

Request for preferential treatment

When a producer in charge of producing and making a program or of relevant work at a broadcasting company received a solicitation to frequently play a certain singer's songs for his or her program (Supreme Court decision 90Do2257, January 15, 1991)

Request for preferential adoption · selection

Case 1: when a person in charge of recommending a entrusting bill collector as a branch manager of the Korea Electric Power Corporation received a solicitation from someone to make a preferential recommendation for him or her to substitute for the current bill collector A if A resigns (Supreme Court decision 89Do495, December 12, 1989)

Case 2: when the material division manager and an employee of a construction company A in charge of purchase contracts received a solicitation to sign a contract for the supply of goods in the form of a negotiated contract with the Korea Veterans Welfare Corporation and to offer conveniences in return for rewards (Supreme Court decision 90Do665, August. 10, 1990)

Case 3: when professors received a solicitation from A running a publisher to choose books published by A's company as textbooks or to entrust the publishing of collected materials to be used as a textbook to A's company (Supreme Court decision 95Do2090, October 11, 1996)

Case 4: when A in charge of power transmission facility management and power transmission line construction site supervision as a power transmission and distribution engineer for the Korea Electric Power Corporation received a solicitation from B, a subcontractor working in the power transmission line and pylon relocation construction business, to connive even if there are defects in construction (Supreme Court decision 91Do2418, November 26, 1991)

Request for unlawful · improper handling

When a person working in the appraisal business received a solicitation to underestimate the value of an object of appraisal (Supreme Court decision 82Do925, July 13 1982)

4 Prohibition of Performing Duties as Solicited

Article 6 (Prohibition of Performance of Duties as Solicited)

Upon receipt of an improper solicitation, no public servant, etc. shall perform his/her duties as solicited.

A public official, etc. who receives an improper solicitation is prohibited from performing his or her duties by it, and a public official who performs his or her duties as directed by such an improper solicitation is subject to a criminal punishment.

This applies to all public officials, etc. who are included among ‘public officials, etc. performing their duties’ (public officials handling the matter themselves, directors·directors general who are authorized to grant approval, the heads of agencies who are not authorized to grant approval but authorized to command and supervise or relevant persons).

Even though a public official has delegated his or her discretion in accordance with the internal rules and regulations on discretion delegation, such a public official (e.g. the head of an agency) shall be included as well.

When a superior public official authorized to grant approval, or a superior public official not authorized to grant approval but authorized to command and supervise receives an improper solicitation and handles the matter by giving directions, etc. to an inferior public official;

- As a superior public official is categorized as a public official performing duties, it is deemed that he or she has performed his or her duties as directed by an improper solicitation and thus shall be subject to a criminal punishment.
- As a superior public official's directions are also deemed as an improper solicitation for a third party, an inferior public official shall clearly express an intention to refuse the solicitation, and should he or she follow such directions even though he or she is aware that this is an improper solicitation for a third party, it is deemed that he or she has performed his or her duties as directed by an improper solicitation and thus shall be subject to a criminal punishment

In the event that a person authorized to grant approval is unaware that an inferior public official who received an improper solicitation performed duties as directed by the improper solicitation, no criminal punishment shall be imposed as there was no intent proved against the senior official (who shall not be punished as a negligent criminal either as there are no rules on punishment for negligent criminals in the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act).

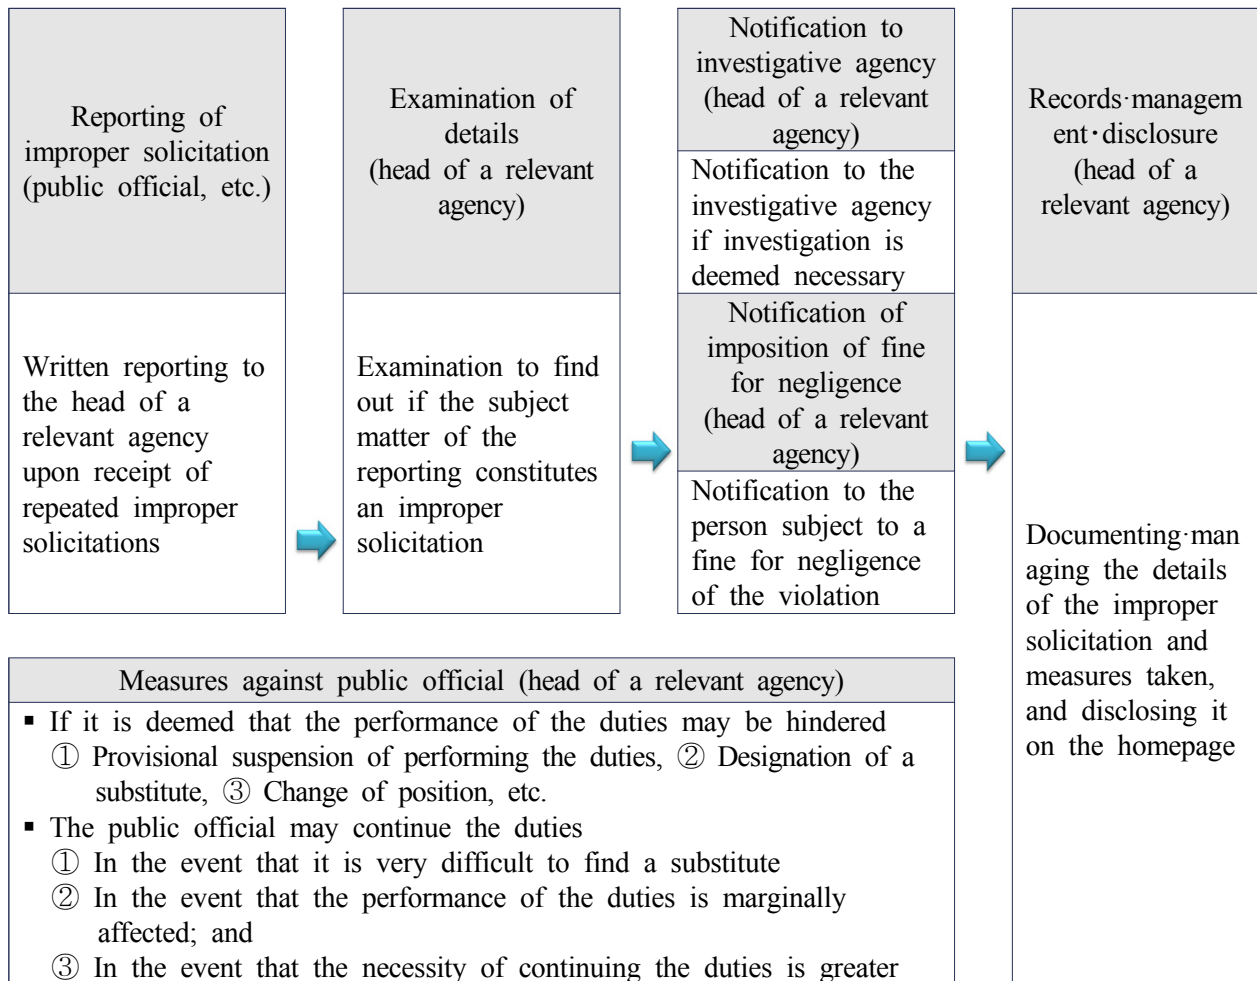

Meanwhile, no person who makes an improper solicitation directly for himself or herself shall be subject to sanctions, but any public official, etc. who performs his or her duties as directed by the improper solicitation shall be subject to a criminal punishment. If a person who makes an improper solicitation directly for himself or herself is a public official, etc., he or she shall be subject to mandatory disciplinary action pursuant to Article 21.

5 Procedure for Handling Improper Solicitations

Article 7 (Reporting and Processing Improper Solicitations)

- (1) Upon receipt of an improper solicitation, a public servant, etc. shall notify the person making such solicitation that it constitutes an improper solicitation and clearly express his/her intention to reject it.
- (2) If a public servant, etc. receives the same improper solicitation again, even after taking action as described in paragraph (1), he/she shall report such fact to the head of the relevant institution in writing (including electronic documents; hereinafter the same shall apply).
- (3) Upon receipt of a report pursuant to paragraph (2), the head of the relevant institution shall promptly verify whether the subject-matter of the report constitutes an improper solicitation, by examining the background, purport, details, and evidence, etc. of the report.
- (4) If the head of a relevant institution becomes aware that there was an improper solicitation or if he/she deems that performance of relevant duties may be hindered during the process of reporting or verifying an improper solicitation under paragraphs (2) and (3), the head of the relevant institution may take any of the following measures against the public servant, etc. who received the improper solicitation:
 1. Provisional suspension from the duties;
 2. Designation of a substitute for the duties;
 3. Transfer of position;
 4. Any other measure prescribed by the National Assembly Regulations, the Supreme Court Regulations, the Constitutional Court Regulations, the National Election Commission Regulations, or Presidential Decrees.
- (5) Notwithstanding paragraph (4), the head of the relevant institution may let the public servant, etc. continue his/her duties in any of the following cases. In such cases, the head of the relevant institution shall have the officer in charge, provided for in Article 20, of the relevant institution, or another public servant, etc. verify and check regularly as to whether the public servant, etc. performs his/her duties in a fair manner:
 1. Where it is highly impracticable to replace the public servant, etc. performing the duties;
 2. Where the impact on the performance of duties by the public servant, etc. is insignificant;
 3. Where the necessity of continuing the duties is greater in the light of protecting national security, developing the national economy, and promoting any other public interest.
- (6) A public servant, etc. may also submit a report described in paragraph (2) to a supervisory institution, the Board of Audit and Inspection, an investigation agency, or the Anti-Corruption and Civil Rights Commission.
- (7) The head of a relevant institution may publish details of an improper solicitation and measures taken against it, to the extent not violating other Acts and subordinate statutes, on the Internet webpage, etc. of the public institution.
- (8) Except as expressly provided in paragraphs (1) through (7), other matters necessary for reporting, verifying, processing, recording, managing, disclosing, etc., an improper solicitation shall be prescribed by Presidential Decree.

Procedure for handling improper solicitation reporting

A. Duty of refusal of improper solicitations

For most public officials, it is not easy to refuse an improper solicitation by the very nature of it even though they know well they have to refuse. As most improper solicitations are made by those the public official knows well, it is not easy to refuse an improper solicitation from the beginning. If the public official recognizes that he or she may be subject to a breakoff of a relationship or direct·indirect disadvantages, it is effectively difficult to refuse.

The Improper Solicitation and Graft Act imposes the duty of refusal by stipulating that public officials, etc. clearly express an intention to refuse when an improper solicitation is first received. This is intended as the basis for them to refuse without worrying about the possibility of a breakoff of a relationship or direct·indirect disadvantages.

B. Reporting of improper solicitations

(1) Same improper solicitation incurring obligation of report

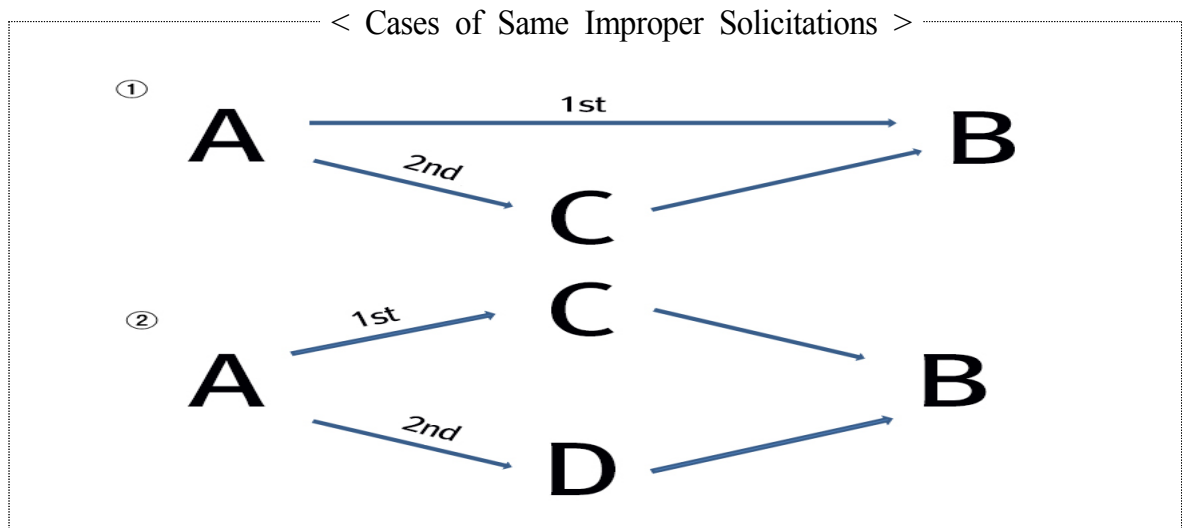

Determination of same improper solicitation

If a public official, etc. receives an improper solicitation (for the first time), he or she shall notify the person who made the improper solicitation that the solicitation is improper and clearly express an intention to refuse the solicitation (Paragraph 1 of Article 7 of the Act).

However, If he or she receives "the same improper solicitation" again, an obligation is incurred to report such fact to the head of his or her agency (Paragraph 2 of Article 7 of the Act). Reporting is a means that can protect good public official, etc. from ex post facto liabilities arising from any event.

Whether a solicitation is the same one is judged on 'the criteria of public official, etc. who have the obligation to report' and whether the contents of both improper solicitations are identical. The scope of same improper solicitations was set from the perspective of public officials pursuant to the reporting process' purport of providing protection to any good public official, etc.

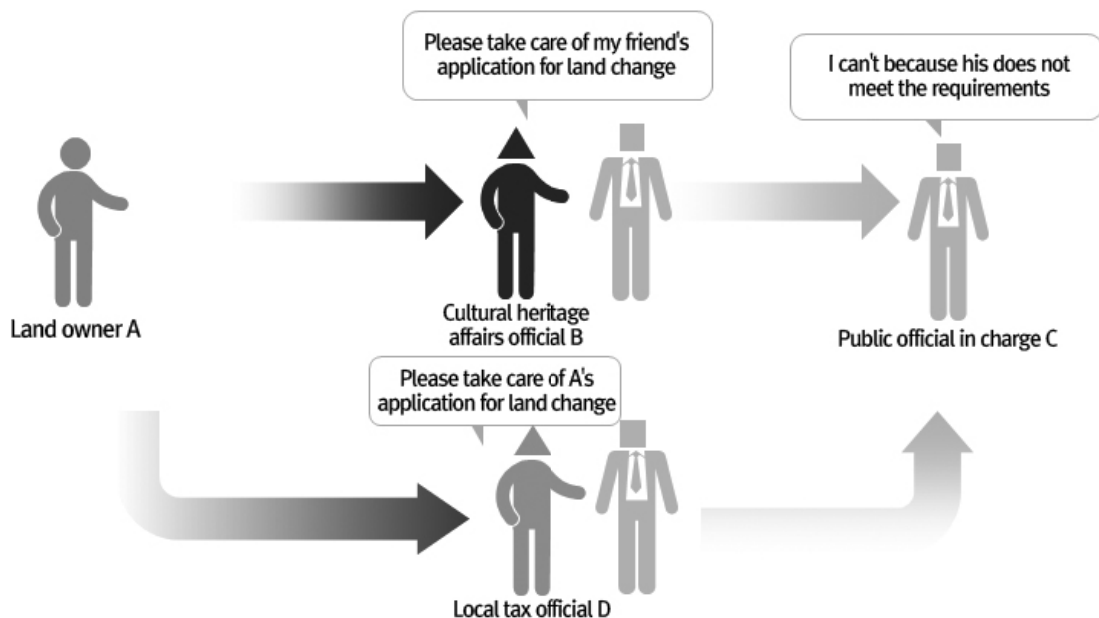

When a party of interest carries out an improper solicitation in person, and then performs the same act of solicitation again via a third party, or carries out two back-to-back improper solicitations via a third party, the request constitutes a same improper solicitation that is required to be reported.

Improper solicitations made by a multiple number of employees at the same corporation on a single subject matter constitutes a same improper solicitation which is required to be reported on.

Example cases

#1. A, who owns a parcel of land located inside a development restriction zone, filed an application for the change in the form and quality of his parcel to C, a public official at the ○○ local government office in charge of the matter, then realizing that the land fails to meet the requirements for the approval of such a change under the Act on Special Measures for Designation and Management of Development Restriction Zones and its Decree, requested via B, a cultural heritage affairs official at the ○○ local government office and a friend of his, for the approval of his application, and when C refused his request, went on to solicit D, another public official at process handling of the ○○ local government office in charge of local taxes, for the approval,

Any duty related to the permission for the alteration of the form and quality of land under the Act on Special Measures for Designation and Management of Development Restriction Zones and its Decree is subject to the prohibition of improper solicitations clause under the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act (Article 5 (1) 1).

Trading in influence so that a subject matter is handled in violation of Acts and subordinate statutes when it does not meet the requirements for permission for the alteration of the form and quality of land under the Act on Special Measures for Designation and Management of Development Restriction Zones and its Decree is subject to the prohibition of improper solicitations clause.

Since A, the owner of the land, committed an act of improper solicitation via a third party

B, as a party of interest, he may be punished by an administrative fine not exceeding 10 million won.

Since the public officials B and D made improper solicitations on behalf of a third party A, and are subject to the definition of public official or relevant person who require a high level of integrity, they may receive an aggravated punishment of administrative fine not exceeding 30 million won.

As the public officials in charge C clearly expressed his/her intent to refuse the initial improper solicitation of B, he/she is not subject to any disciplinary action or punishment.

If the public officials in charge C fails to report the subject matter, as he/she have received the second identical solicitation through D, he/she may be subject to disciplinary actions.

If the public official in charge C approves the application for the change of form and quality of land as a result of an improper solicitation, he/she may be subject to criminal punishment (imprisonment not exceeding 2 years or fine not exceeding 20 million won).

#2. A, an employee at OO Construction Inc., requested C, the public official in charge at the relevant local government office, for the approval of a building permit in violation of any building-related acts and subordinate statutes, in which, the day after C refused the request, B, another employee of the construction company requested C for the same subject matter

Any duty related to granting of building permit is subject to the improper solicitations clause under the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act (Article 5 (1) 1).

Requesting for building permit in violation of any building-related acts and subordinate statutes is subject to the prohibition of improper solicitations clause.

C who is in charge of building permit affairs has the obligation to express his or her intent to refuse any improper solicitations from the construction company employee A. Since C received a same improper solicitation for the second time from the employee B, despite initially expressing his intent to refuse, obligation to report the matter to the head of the relevant agency incurs, the failure of which may constitute cause for disciplinary action.

Since employees A and B committed improper solicitation on behalf of a third party, the corporation, they may be punished by an administrative fine not exceeding 20 million won.

Since improper solicitations related to the duties of any executives and employees of a corporation are for the interest of the corporation, and because the effects of such improper solicitations also belong to the corporation, it constitutes improper solicitations for a third party.

○○ Construction Inc. may be punished by an administrative fine not exceeding 20 million won under the Responsibility of Legal Persons, etc. provision of Article 24 of the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act. Provided, that the corporation was not negligent in giving due attention and supervision concerning the relevant duties so as to prevent such violation, it may be exempt from any punishments.

(2) Methods of reporting

In case a public official, etc. receives a recurring same improper solicitation, he or she shall report the fact to the head of the relevant agency in writing (including electronic document). Items to be reported are personal information of the reporter, intent, reason, and content of the report, etc.

A public official, etc. may submit a report to a supervisory body, the Board of Audit and Inspection, an investigative agency or the Anti-Corruption and Civil Rights Commission.

When evidence that may prove the subject matter of a report is available, it is required to be submitted with the report for the prevention of any false or irresponsible reports. False or any other improper reporting is exempt from any protection or compensation, while a false report filed with the intent to make another person subject to criminal punishment or disciplinary action constitutes an offence of false accusation.

C. Measures to be taken against public official, etc. who received improper solicitation

(1) Types of measures

Certain measures are taken against any public official, etc. who has received an improper solicitation in order to cut off in advance possible public suspicion about the fairness of the handling their duties.

Measures to be taken against public official, etc. who has received an improper solicitation include "provisional suspension of performing the duties, designation of a substitute, change of position," and any other measures set forth in the Presidential Decree.

While the measures of "provisional suspension of performing the duties" and "designation of a substitute" set forth in the Act are temporary, "change of position" means a complete exclusion from the line of duty.

Category	Description
Provisional Suspension of Duties	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Temporary suspension of the duty in question without any changes of personnel.
Designation of a Substitute	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Measure to allow another person to perform the duty in question when the actual person in charge is incapable of continuing on his or her performance of the duty.
Change of Position	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Change in the assignment of the public official or relevant person in question

(2) Cases for exception

If required, a head of the relevant agency may let the public official who has received an improper solicitation continue his or her duties in any of the following cases:

- In the event that it is very difficult to find a substitute for the public official who can perform the duties
- In the event that the performance of the duties of the public official is marginally affected
- In the event that the necessity of continuing the duties is greater in the light of protecting national security, developing the national economy and promoting any other public interest

In any of these cases, the head of the relevant agency should have an official in charge or other public official verify and check regularly as to whether the public official performs his or her duties in a fair manner.

D. Disclosure of the details of an improper solicitation and the measures taken

(1) Disclosure decision

The head of the relevant agency has the discretion about whether he or she should disclose an improper solicitation to prevent any similar incidents from occurring. Such decision should be made after considering all the related factors including whether any administrative fine was imposed, a conviction was decided, or if such disclosure is necessary for the prevention of other improper solicitations.

(2) Scope and methods

Scope: the Act only lists details of improper solicitation and measures taken as items to be disclosed while not mentioning about personal information.

Because the Act failed to mandate that the Presidential Decree set forth additional details about the scope of the items to be disclosed, personal information could not be prescribed as an item subject to disclosure in the Decree.

Method: details are disclosed on Internet homepage of the public institution with a view to improve efforts for the prevention of improper solicitations.

6 Violation Penalties

Article 21 (Disciplinary Action)

The head of a relevant institution, etc. shall take disciplinary action against any public servant, etc. who violates this Act or an order issued pursuant to this Act.

Article 22 (Penalty Provisions)

(2) Any of the following persons shall be subject to imprisonment with labor for not more than two years or a fine not exceeding 20 million won:

1. A public servant, etc. (including private persons performing public duties under Article 11) who accepts improper solicitation and performs his/her duties as solicited, in violation of Article 6;

Article 23 (Imposition of Administrative Fines)

(1) Any of the following persons shall be subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 30 million won:

1. A public servant, etc. (including private persons performing public duties under Article 11) who makes an improper solicitation to another public servant, etc. (including private persons performing public duties under Article 11) for a third party, in violation of Article 5 (1): Provided, That no administrative fine shall be imposed if criminal punishment is imposed under the Criminal Act or any other Act; if criminal punishment is imposed after an administrative fine is imposed, the imposition of the administrative fine shall be revoked;
- (2) A person (excluding persons subject to paragraph (1) 1), who makes an improper solicitation to a public servant, etc. (including private persons performing public duties under Article 11) for a third party, in violation of Article 5 (1), shall be subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 20 million won: Provided, That no administrative fine shall be imposed if criminal punishment is imposed under the Criminal Act or any other Act; if criminal punishment is imposed after an administrative fine is imposed, the imposition of the administrative fine shall be revoked.
- (3) A person (excluding persons subject to paragraph (1) 1 and (2)) who makes an improper solicitation to a public servant, etc. (including private persons performing public duties under Article 11), through a third party, in violation of Article 5 (1), shall be subject to an administrative fine not exceeding ten million won: Provided, That no administrative fine shall be imposed if criminal punishment is imposed under the Criminal Act or any other Act; if criminal punishment is imposed after an administrative fine is imposed, the imposition of the administrative fine shall be revoked.
- (7) The head of a relevant institution shall notify a competent court, having jurisdiction over cases of administrative fines under the Non-Contentious Case Procedure Act, of a violation committed by those subject to the administrative fines set forth in paragraphs (1) through (5).

A. Disciplinary actions

The head of each relevant agency shall take disciplinary action against each public official who violates this Act or Decree pursuant this Act. It means that a disciplinary action should be taken pursuant to the relevant disciplinary standards and procedure.

Although any "direct improper solicitation for his or her own interest" is exempt from administrative fines, if such solicitation is committed by a public official, it is a violation of this Act (Article 5) and is subject to disciplinary actions.

B. Administrative fine or criminal punishment

An administrative fine may be imposed through a trial (decision) at a competent court after the head of the relevant agency notify the court of the violation.

A person who makes an improper solicitation via or for a third party may be subject to an administrative fine.

- A person who makes an improper solicitation via a third person may be punished by an administrative fine not exceeding 10 million won.
- As for improper solicitations made for a third person, a public official, etc. may be punished by an administrative fine not exceeding 30 million won, while other offenders may face a fine not exceeding 20 million won.

An improper solicitation made to a public official, etc. in person and in his/her own interest is excluded from punishment by an administrative fine.

A public official who performs his or her duties as directed by an improper solicitation may be punished by imprisonment for not more than two years or by a fine not exceeding 20 million won.

Although a person who makes an improper solicitation in person and in his or her own interest is not imposed of any administrative fine, the public official, etc. who performs his or her duty pursuant to the solicitation is subject to criminal punishment.

Sanction by improper solicitation types

Requirement		Sanction level
Subject	Types
Stakeholders	Improper solicitation for oneself	No sanction
	improper solicitation through a third party	administrative fine up to 10 mil. won
Private person	Improper solicitation for a third party	administrative fine up to 20 mil. won
Public officials, etc.	Improper solicitation for a third party	administrative fine up to 30 mil. won
	Performing duties directed by improper solicitation	Imprisonment up to 2 years or fine up to 20 mil. won

Example cases (solicitation made in person)

A, who owns a parcel of land located inside a development restriction zone, filed an application for the change in the form and quality of his parcel to C, a public official at the ○○-Gun Office in charge of the duty. Then, even he knew that the land failed to meet the requirements for the approval of such change under the Act on Special Measures for Designation and Management of Development Restriction Zones and its Decree, A requested C to grant approval for his application.

Any duty related to the permission for the alteration of the form and quality of land under the Act on Special Measures for Designation and Management of Development Restriction Zones and its Decree is subject to the prohibition of improper solicitations clause under the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act (Article 5 (1) 1).

Trading in influence so that a subject matter is handled in violation of Acts and subordinate statutes when it does not meet the requirements for permission for the alteration of the form and quality of land under the Act on Special Measures for Designation and Management of Development Restriction Zones and its Decree is subject to the prohibition of improper solicitations clause.

Since the land owner A made an improper solicitation for his own interest as a party of interest, he is exempt from any sanction.

Since C, the public official in charge, received an improper solicitation for the first time from the land owner A, C is not subject to any disciplinary action or penalty should he express the intent for refusal.

Should the public official in charge C receive the same improper solicitation again, C is put under the duty to report the matter to the head of the relevant agency, the failure of which may be subject to disciplinary actions.

If the public official in charge C grants the land owner A the approval for the change of type and quality of the land pursuant to A's improper solicitation, C may be subject to criminal punishment (imprisonment not exceeding 2 years or a fine not exceeding 20 million won).

Although a person who makes an improper solicitation in person and in his or her own interest is not imposed of any administrative fine, the public official or relevant person who performs his or her duty pursuant to the solicitation is subject to criminal punishment.

V. Prohibition of Acceptance of Money, Goods, etc.

V

Prohibition of Acceptance of Money, Goods, etc.1 Prohibited Money, Goods, etc.*Article 8 (Prohibition of Receipt of Money, Goods, etc.)

- (1) No public servant, etc. shall accept, request, or promise to receive any money, goods, etc. exceeding one million won at a time or three million won in a fiscal year from the same person, regardless of any connection to his/her duties and regardless of any pretext such as donation, sponsorship, gift, etc.
- (2) No public servant, etc. shall, in connection with his/her duties, accept, request, or promise to receive any money, goods, etc. not exceeding the amount prescribed by paragraph (1), regardless of whether the money, goods, etc. are given as part of any quid pro quo.
- (3) An honorarium for an outside lecture, etc. described in Article 10, or any of the following shall not constitute money, goods, etc., the receipt of which is prohibited by paragraph (1) or (2):
 1. Money, goods, etc. that a public institution offers to its public servants, etc. and seconded public servants, etc.; or a senior public servant, etc. offers to subordinate public servants, etc. for purposes of consolation, encouragement, reward, etc.;
 2. Money, goods, etc. the value of which is within the limits specified by Presidential Decree, in the form of food and beverages, congratulatory or condolence money, gifts, etc. offered for purposes of facilitating performance of duties, social relationships, rituals, or aid;
 3. Money, goods, etc. offered from a legitimate source of right such as payment of debts (excluding donation) incurred in a private transaction;
 4. Money, goods, etc. provided by relatives (relatives defined in Article 777 of the Civil Act) of a public servant, etc.;
 5. Money, goods, etc. provided by employees' mutual aid societies, clubs, alumni associations, hometown associations, friendship clubs, religious groups, social organizations, etc., related to a public servant, etc. to their members in accordance with the rules prescribed by respective organizations; and money, goods, etc. offered by those who have long-term and continuous relationships with a public servant, etc., such as a member of the aforementioned groups, to the public servant, etc. who is in need due to a disease, disaster, etc.;
 6. Money, goods, etc., provided uniformly in a normally accepted range by an organizer of an official event related to the duties of a public servant, etc. to all participants thereof, in the form of transportation, accommodation, food and beverages, etc.;
 7. Souvenirs, promotional goods, etc. to be distributed to multiple unspecified persons, or awards or prizes given in a contest, a raffle, or a lottery;
 8. Money, goods, etc. permitted by other Acts, subordinate statutes, standards, or societal rules and norms.

- (4) No spouse of a public servant, etc. shall, in connection with the duties of the public servant, etc., receive, request, or promise to receive any money, goods, etc. that public servants, etc. are prohibited from accepting (hereinafter referred to as "prohibited money, goods, etc.") under paragraph (1) or (2).
- (5) No person shall offer, promise to offer, or express any intention to offer any prohibited money, goods, etc. to any public servant, etc. or to his/her spouse.

A. Money, goods, etc. subject to a punishment

(1) Any money, goods, etc. exceeding one million won at a time or three million won in a fiscal year

Cases subject to a criminal punishment

Any public official will be subject to a criminal punishment for receiving any money, goods, etc. exceeding one million won at a time or three million won in a fiscal year from the same person, regardless of the relationship between such offer and his or her duties, and the motive for such offer.

Under the Criminal Act, an offense related to bribery requires a proof that the benefit is given because of the official duty concerned and intended to reward the recipient for performance or nonperformance of the duty, and loopholes thereby arose as the causality thereunder was hard to prove.

Therefore, in order to attain the legislative purpose of the Act to root out hospitality and entertainment practices which may lead the public to suspect the impartiality of official acts, the provisions here forbid the items as described above regardless whether they are given because of the duty of the public official.

In addition, money, goods, etc. exceeding 1 million won, deemed as not a small amount in the light of social norms, might be interpreted as a conduct arising from the potential, if not immediate, connection to the duties of the recipient in the future.

The threshold of 1 million won at a time is a reasonable standard set comprehensively reflecting the people's expectation level on the integrity of the public service, diverse opinions collected from open discussion sessions and consultations with experts, and the case study of the Public Official Election Act. Under the Public Official Election Act, an administrative fine for receiving money, goods, etc. is altered to a criminal punishment when the benefit exceeds 1 million won.

When the types of punishment differ or the punishment is aggravated based on a certain threshold, questions concerning the gravity of a related crime arise should the benefit slightly exceeds the threshold.

Pursuant to the Act on the Aggravated Punishment, Etc. of Specific Economic Crimes, any person who commits crimes, including but not limited to fraud, extortion, embezzlement and breach of trust, as prescribed in the Criminal Act are subject to the aggravated punishment should the related benefit or gain be valued at 500 million won or more.

Example case

Public Official A, who had been working at the Land Register Department of a municipal government for a decade, was about to be transferred to a governmental ministry that had no relations to A's current function and responsibilities. Certified Public Appraiser B, who had often contacted A for the land register work, gave a wrist watch worth 1.5 million won as a gift purchased during his overseas trip.

Public Official A is subject to criminal punishment for his receiving of the wrist watch exceeding 1 million won per occasion from Certified Public Appraiser B (imprisonment for not more than three years or a fine of 30 million won or less).

B is subject to criminal punishment for presenting the gift exceeding 1 million won per occasion to A (imprisonment for not more than three years or a fine of 30 million won or less).

Given the relationships between A and B, the gift is hard to be deemed as money, goods, etc. acceptable according to social norms.

(2) Money, goods, etc. valued at 1 million won or less per occasion

Cases in connection with duties subject to an administrative fine

Any public official will be subject to an administrative fine for receiving any money, goods, etc. worth 1 million won or less at a time in connection with his or her duties, regardless of whether such offer is given in exchange of any favors. Any money, goods, etc. worth 1 million won or less at a time without any connection with his or her duties is not prohibited by the law.

A public official who accepts any money, goods, etc. valued at 1 million won or less at a time in connection with his or her duty will be subject to criminal punishment for bribery as prescribed in the Criminal Act should the offer prove to reward the official for any performance or nonperformance of the duty.

Example case

Pharmaceutical company employee A, elementary school teacher B, and public electric corporation employee C are old friends as they grew up together in the same hometown. After the year-end reunion of the elementary school alumni association, they had dinner together at an expensive Korean restaurant, and A paid the bill of 600,000 won.

Both B and C are public officials subject to the provisions of the Act.

Any money, goods, etc. worth 1 million won or less at a time in connection with his or her duties is subject to an administrative fine.

Although B and C were treated by A with fine dining worth 200,000 won per person, they are not subject to punishment as the event had no connection with their duties.

The relationships between them are hardly deemed to have any connection to their duties without any special circumstances involved.

B. "Same person" and "at a time"

(1) Overview

Any public official will be subject to criminal punishment for receiving any money, goods, etc. exceeding 1 million won at a time from the same person or subject to an administrative fine for receiving any money, goods, etc. valued at 1 million won or less in connection with his or her duties.

The types of punishment can differ in accordance with the interpretation of the "same person" and "at a time".

(2) Same person

With respect to "same person," it does not matter whether the advantage is offered or given by the provider directly or through a third party, but it will be determined based on who is the "actual provider".

According to a relevant precedent on the ceiling of loan granted to one and the same person, the ruling was based on to whom the loan was attributed in practice.

Judicial case: the court ruled that even if the loan granted in the name of other members of the union did not exceed the ceiling for one and the same person, the act of such borrowing violated the provisions in Article 32 of the former Credit Unions Act, as the loan based on the actual borrower to whom the loan was attributed exceeded the limit. (Supreme Court decision 2001Do3531, November 13, 2001)

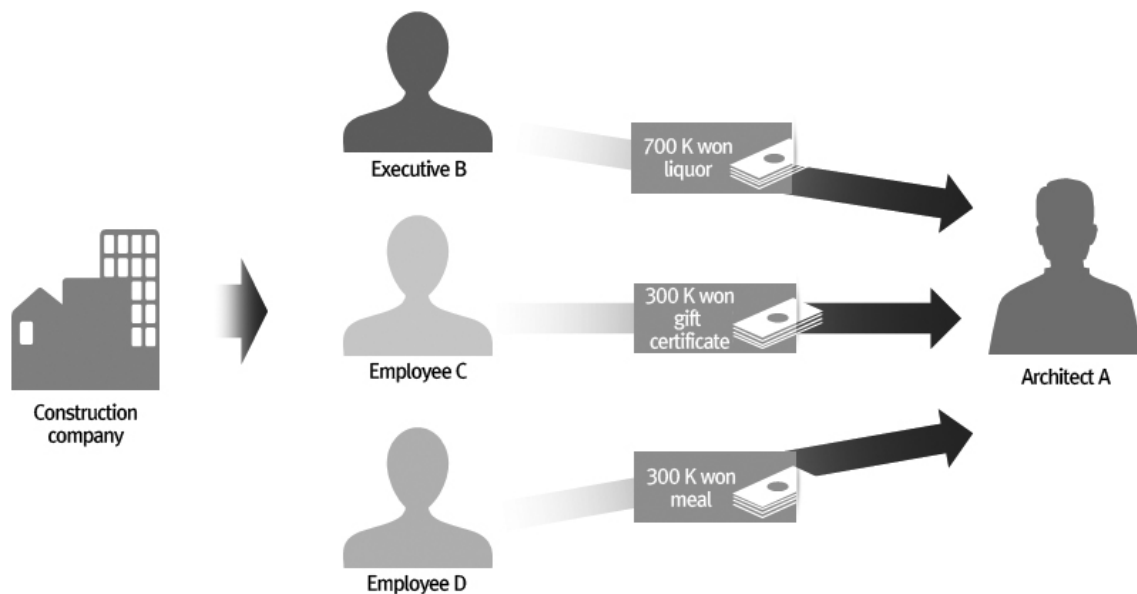

In addition, the 'same person' will be determined based on what or who is the source of the advantage. As the source of the advantage matters, the same person may include not only natural persons but also legal persons in principle.

However, as 'no person' prescribed in Paragraph 5 of Article 8 of the Act on the prohibition of offering any unacceptable advantage also refers to the provider of the advantage, the 'same person' as the provider only includes natural persons, not legal persons.

Where a representative of a legal person or organization, or an agent, employee or other servant of a legal person commits a violation hereunder concerning relevant duties, the legal person will be punished by a fine, or administrative fine pursuant to Article 24 of the Act on the responsibility of legal persons, etc.

Example case

A construction company's design was proposed as a candidate for the screening session of the Design Review Subcommittee under the Turn-key Examination Committee in a province. Then, Executive B of the company sent a bottle of liquor worth 700,000 won to Architect A, who was a member of the subcommittee, Employee C of the company offered a gift certificate worth 300,000 won to A, and Employee D of the company also treated A with a meal valued at 300,000 won.

Architect A is not a public official but a member of the subcommittee, who performs public duties, and therefore, A is subject to the Act.

Architect A received financial benefits worth 1.3 million won (sum of the gift, the gift certificate and fine dining) from the construction company. Architect A received these benefits from B, C and D, but the source and the actual provider of them is the construction company.

Architect A's acts of receiving these benefits from B, C and D can be deemed as one occasion considering the temporal continuity and the relevancy of the purposes of such offers to affect the function of the examiner. The one occasion will be determined by considering the number of incidents in the legal sense, not merely based on the frequency of such conducts in the natural sense.

A is subject to criminal punishment (imprisonment for not more than three years or a fine not exceeding 30 million won) for receiving advantages exceeding 1 million won per occasion from the construction company.

B, C and D are subject to an administrative fine of two to five times the value of the financial benefit related to the violation for each of them offering A the benefit valued at 1 million won or less. However, B, C and D can be liable to criminal punishment as co-principals (offering benefit exceeding 1 million won per occasion) if they jointly conducted the offer, knowing each other's intent.

'No one' prescribed in Paragraph 5 of Article 8 herein on the prohibition of offering any unacceptable financial benefit includes natural persons only, who are able to perform the act of the offer in practice, and excludes legal persons.

The construction firm is also subject to an administrative fine as its employees commit a violation concerning the relevant duties in accordance the provisions hereof on the responsibility of legal persons. Should Employee B, C and D jointly conduct the offer, knowing each other's intent and thereby be liable to criminal punishment as co-principals, the construction firm will be subject to a fine (criminal punishment) as prescribed in the provisions hereof on the responsibility of legal persons. Provided, that the provisions may not apply where the firm has not been negligent in giving due attention and supervision concerning the relevant duties of its employees so as to prevent such violation.

(3) At a time (one occasion)

It matters whether the one occasion means the frequency of conducts in the natural sense or the number of incidents in the legal sense. If a number of conducts of offering and/or receiving can be assessed as one occasion, they will constitute one violation and the types of punishment can change accordingly.

The one occasion will be determined by considering the number of incidents in the legal sense, not merely based on the frequency of actual conducts. When there is a temporal and spacial proximity or a temporal continuity between the conducts, they are evaluated as one occasion. Providing benefits in several slots (the so-called "splitting") cannot be deemed as one occasion in the natural sense, but it can be deemed as one occasion in the legal sense.

If a number of conducts of offering and/or receiving can be assessed as one occasion, their benefits or value will be summed up as one violation, and any occasion with total value exceeding 1 million won will be liable to criminal punishment.

Example case

Department Head A of a public corporation, Seoul Office Head B of the Corporation, and CEO C of an accounting firm dined together, and C paid 600,000 won of the bill. On the same day, they wined together, and again C paid the 3 million won of the bill.

A and B are subject to criminal punishment as each of them received fine dining and entertainment worth 1.2 million won in total—200,000 won for meal and 1 million won for liquor, respectively. If the cost per each individual is not readily determined with the provider involved in wining and dining together, an equally divided amount of the total will be the value offered and received.

As the conducts of offering fine dining and wining had a temporal and spacial proximity, they can be assessed as one occasion.

C is subject to criminal punishment for offering advantages exceeding 1 million at one occasion to A and B, respectively.

The accounting firm will be subject to criminal punishment (fine) unless the legal person has not been negligent in giving due attention and supervision concerning the relevant duties of its employees so as to prevent such violation.

C. Fiscal year

"Fiscal year" means a period used for calculating tax revenue and expenditure.

Fiscal year herein refers to the fiscal year of the public institution where a public official who receives prohibited benefit belong. With respect to the provider of the benefit, the fiscal year beforementioned is applied.

The fiscal year of governmental institutions, local governments and other public agencies generally commences on January 1 of each year, and ends on December 31 of each year.

Legislative case: the National Finance Act and the Local Finance Act stipulate that the State's fiscal year commences on January 1 of each year, and ends on December 31 of each year.

However, the fiscal year of school, unlike other public institutions, commences on March 1 of each year, and ends on the last day of February of each year.

Example case

Public Official A, who handled the work of acquisition tax at a City government, received financial and other advantages worth 3.5 million won in total from Tax Accountant B from March through December last year. B has not dealt and will not deal any related work at the city government without having solicited any request to A.

In accordance with the Act, any public official who receives money, goods, etc. exceeding 1 million per occasion or 3 million won in any given fiscal year, as well as the provider of the benefit, is subject to criminal punishment.

A is subject to criminal punishment for receiving money, goods, etc. exceeding 3 million won in a fiscal year from B, regardless whether the offer was given because of his duty.

B is also subject to criminal punishment for offering A money, goods, etc. exceeding 3 million won in a fiscal year.

D. Definition of "in connection with duties"

(1) Related provisions in the Act

In accordance with the provisions on the prohibition of acceptance of money, goods, etc., punishment is determined or the duty to report arises based on the relationship between the offer and the duties of the public official.

Money, goods, etc. valued at 1 million won or less: the public official will be subject to an administrative fine and the duty to report the case also arises only when he or she receives the money, goods, etc. in connection with their duties.

Spouse of a public official: no spouse of a public official, etc. is allowed to receive any money, goods, etc. in connection with the duties of the public official, and should the public official knowingly fail to report the case, he or she will be subject to punishment.

Outside lecture or relevant activity: should the request for a lecture, etc. be made related to the duties of a public official, he or she should report the request in advance, and will be subject to an administrative fine unless he or she reports a gratuity exceeding the threshold as prescribed in the Act and immediately returns the excess part to the provider.

(2) Related provisions in other statutes

Criminal Act: no public official or an arbitrator shall receive, demand or promise to accept any money, good, etc. in connection with his or her duties. The term "in connection with his or her duties" is a broad concept as it means all duties that the public official handles pertaining to his or her position.

Case 1: the court ruled that "duties" with respect to the offense of bribery meant not only the official duties of a public official as stipulated in statutes but also other activities closely related to the duties, the function or activity in charge as custom or in practice, and/or the performance of duties that could assist or influence decision makers. (Supreme Court decision 1999Do5753, January 19, 2001)

Case 2: the court ruled that "duties" with respect to the offense of bribery meant all duties of a public official pertaining to his or her position, including but not limited to the official duties as stipulated in statutes, other activities related to the duties, past or future function, and any general responsibility or authority arising from the position as prescribed in statutes even if the public official did not handle the function in practice. (Supreme Court decision 2003Do1060, June 13, 2003)

Case 3: the court ruled that in this case, the defendant, who assumed the position of Police Commissioner and was thereby able to exercise any official or a de facto influence over all criminal investigations, received 20,000 dollars from Mr. Kap, who was in relationships with the defendant to call to say hello three to four times a year, as a bribe in connection with the defendant's duties. (Supreme Court decision 2010Do1082, April 29, 2010)

Act on the Aggravated Punishment, Etc. of Specific Economic Crimes: any executive or employee of a financial company, etc. shall not accept, demand or promise to receive any money and valuables or other benefits, in connection with his or her duties.

The court ruled that "in connection with his or her duties" means any work that an executive or an employee of a financial company handles pertaining to his and her position (Supreme Court decision 97Do2836).

Code of Conduct for Public Officials: under the Code, a public official shall not accept money or other valuables from a duty-related party or a duty-related public official.

"Duty-related party" means an individual or an organization whose business is related to a public official's duties and who falls under one of the following eight definitions, and "duty-related public official" mean a public official who receives orders related to his or her duties.

Code of Conduct for Public Officials

Article 2 (Definitions)

The definitions of terms as used in this Decree shall be as follows:

1. The term "duty-related party" means an individual (including a public official who acts in his/her private capacity) or an organization whose business is related to a public official's duties and who falls under one of the following:
 - (a) Any individual or organization that has filed or is sure to file a civil petition under Article 2 (2) 1 and 4 of the Enforcement Decree of the Civil Petitions Procedure Act;
 - (b) Any individual or organization that will get advantages or disadvantages as a direct result of the cancellation of authorization or permission, business suspension, imposition of surcharge or administrative fine;
 - (c) Any individual or organization that is subject to investigation, audit, supervision, inspection, control or administrative guidance;
 - (d) Any individual or organization that will get advantages or disadvantages as a direct result of adjudication, decision, official approval, appraisal, examination, assessment, mediation or arbitration;
 - (e) Any individual or organization that is subject to conscription, muster or mobilization;
 - (f) Any individual or organization that has concluded or is sure to conclude a contract with the State or a local government;
 - (g) Any individual or organization that will get advantages or disadvantages as a direct result of decision or implementation of government policies or public projects; and
 - (h) Any other individual or organization that is related to anti-corruption duties assigned by the head of a central administrative agency (including the head of an entity which is answerable to the President or the Prime Minister); the executive organ of a local government; the head of a local council; and the superintendent of education and the head of board of education of a special metropolitan city, a metropolitan city or a local province (hereinafter referred to as the "Agency Head").

(3) Definition of the term in the Act

In the light of the legislative intent of the Act to prohibit the acceptance of any money, goods, etc. that can make the public suspect impartiality in performing of official duties, the term "in connection with duties" in the Act means the same to the term related to the offense of bribery as stipulated in the Criminal Act. The term in the Act should be further specified with the development and accumulation of precedents on individual cases.

"Duties" in the Act means any work that a public official handles pertaining to his/her position. The court ruled that "duties" meant not only the official duties of a public official as stipulated in statutes but also other activities closely related to the duties, the function or activity in charge as custom or in practice, and/or the performance of duties that assisted or could affect decision makers (Supreme Court decision 1999Do5753, January 19, 2001).

< Duties as general authority >

Official duties under statutes: the term refers to duties as general and/or abstract authority as prescribed in statutes, not necessarily specific duties in practice he or she assumes (General authority theory). The term includes the general authority of a public official, who is under the direction or supervision of a supervisor.

Duties as custom or in practice: the term means duties handled in practice based on general authority under statutes.

Example: the duties of tax officers include archiving and managing documents related to levying and collecting taxes.

The term includes the work a public official handles in practice or following the instruction of a supervisor even if no statutory provision related to the work is available. Therefore, it includes a case in which he or she temporarily represents the work other than his or her own duties, or a case in which he or she is temporarily entrusted with actual authority from a colleague is also included.

Judicial cases:

- a case where a guardian, who handled the work of indirect safe custody for inmates in practice assisting correctional officers, received financial advantages in return for his offering of convenience services such as mailing or bringing in cigarettes. (Supreme Court decision 87Do1463)
- a case where an assistant official, who handled the work of drafting auction approval documents in practice after reviewing the records of auction cases, accepted financial advantages for a solicitation to control the auction approval decision. (Supreme Court decision 84Do2526)

Performance of duties that may assist or influence decision makers: the duties of medium- to low-ranking officials without a final or discretionary decision-making authority, but those who may influence decision makers

Judicial cases: a case where the director of a department, an intermediate approver for Owner-driving Taxi Licensing, received financial advantages related to the issuance of the license. (Supreme Court decision 87Do1472, September 22, 1987)

< A function or activity closely related to duties >

It may not be a part of general authority of a public official, but closely related to his or her duties. The term means any use of the position or activities that can affect the fair performance or nonperformance of the duties based on the influence arising from the duties.

It also includes a function or activity, not a part of general authority, but of which opinions are respected and may influence decision makers.

Example: a case in point is that a prosecution administrative officer, who assisted prosecutors for criminal investigations, accepted financial advantages from the suspect with a request to get a decision of suspension of prosecution.

However, if a public official cannot influence the performance of those with official authority on the duties and thereby does not use of the position, the function or activity of the official has no close connection to his or her duties.

Judicial cases: the court ruled that in this case, a trial clerk received financial or other advantages with a request for sentence reduction, but sentencing is neither a general duty of the clerk nor the clerk was closely related to the duty. (Supreme Court decision 80Do1373, October 14, 1980)

E. Money, goods, etc.

Article 2 (Definitions) The definitions of terms used in this Act shall be as follows:

3. The term “money, goods, etc.” means any of the following:

- (a) Any and all financial interests, including money, securities, real estate, articles, complimentary accommodations, memberships to clubs and facilities, admission tickets for venues and performances, discount coupons, invitation tickets, entertainment tickets, or licenses and permissions to use real estate;
- (b) Offering entertainment, including food and beverages, alcoholic beverages, or golf; or accommodations, including transportation or lodging;
- (c) Other tangible or intangible financial benefits, such as cancelling debts, offering jobs, or granting rights and interests.

(1) Types

The term includes not only property benefits such as money and goods but also any tangible and intangible benefits such as offering of convenience and services to satisfy the needs and desires of humans, including but not limited to:

Financial interests: money, securities, real estate, articles, complimentary accommodations, memberships to clubs and facilities, admission tickets, discount coupons, invitation tickets, entertainment tickets, and entitlements to use real estate;

Offering of entertainment: food and beverages, alcoholic beverages and golf, or accommodations such as transportation and lodging; and

Other tangible and intangible financial benefits: cancellation of debts, employment opportunity, and grant of rights and interests.

Example: an opportunity for application to scholarships and prostitution can be included

(2) Standard for value calculation

General standard

The value of financial benefits is quite significant as it serves as the standard to determine the types of punishment (criminal punishment or an administrative fine) and calculate the amount of a fine.

Time standard: the value is estimated based on the time of the conduct (when the financial benefit is accepted, required, or promised to receive or offered or promised or expressed to provide).

Value standard: the value is based on the price actually paid unless there is any significant gap between the actual price and the market price. If you cannot confirm the price paid, its value is estimated based on the market value (usual transaction price).

In the case when the market price and the purchasing price differ or the purchasing price cannot be confirmed with a receipt, the value is calculated based on the market price.

The court ruled that in the case when price data were different from each other, objective and reasonable data with credibility were given priority, but if it was difficult to tell, the value must be estimated based on the data favorable to the offender (Supreme Court decision 2001Do7056, April 9, 2002).

Individual standards

Supply opportunities for goods and/or services: the benefit is equivalent to the supply price deducting the cost of the goods, or to the actual service price deducting the legitimate service price.

Judicial cases

- The court ruled that in this case, the defendant supplied goods at about 10% higher than the market price and thereby gained a corresponding benefit or obtained the opportunity to supply the goods to the shopping center F constructed by the D beforementioned, which should be deemed as illegal profits even if the supply price was not higher than the market price, and therefore, the amount of the bribe received by the defendant must be equivalent to the corresponding benefit. (Supreme Court decision 99Do4920, January 25, 2002)
- The court ruled that the actual service value on the appraisal report submitted by the defendant should be deemed as the legitimate value of the service. (Seoul High Court Ruling 2008No42, August 8, 2008)

Entertainment: when the provider accompanies on the entertainment, the benefit is equivalent to the actual expense spent for each individual, the equally divided amount of the total if the actual expenses per person is not readily estimated, or the sum of the expenses spent for a public official as well as for a third party when the public official invites the third party to the entertainment unless there are any special condition involved.

Judicial cases: the court ruled that in the case in which the briber accompanied the defendant for the entertainment and paid the expenses, the amount of bribery received by the defendant must be equivalent to first, the expense spent to treat the defendant, separate from the spending consumed by the briber for himself; second, the equally divided amount of the total if the expense for each individual was not confirmed; or third, the sum of the expenses spent for the defendant added with the amount spent for a third party if the defendant himself invited the third party and received entertainment together and unless any special occasion was involved such as that the third party was also a public official and treated pertaining to his or her position. (Supreme Court decision 99Do5294, October 12, 2001)

Borrowing of Money: the value of the borrowed money is equivalent to the financial benefit (loan interest rate or statutory interest rate) if money is borrowed for free of charge, or the difference between the agreed interest rate and the loan interest rate or the statutory interest rate if borrowing is made at a substantially low rate of interest.

Judicial cases: according to the court's ruling, should the offender gain illegal property benefits from borrowing money for free of charge, the unjustifiable benefit received by the offender must be equivalent to the corresponding financial profit and therefore, the corresponding profit, not the money borrowed for free of charge, should be subject to additional collection. In this regard, as the corresponding financial benefit subject to additional collection must be estimated in an objective manner, the calculation should be based on the loan interest rate borne by the offender if the offender would borrow money from a financial institution in a usual manner or the statutory interest rate applied to the loan conditions of the offender as prescribed under the Civil Act or Commercial Act if the loan interest rate cannot be readily confirmed, and thereby the calculated financial profit earned from borrowing any financial or other advantage for free of charge from its receipt date to the expiry date should be collected unless the agreement on the expiry date or damages for delay is a pretense and therefore shall be deemed null and void. (Supreme Court decision 2008Do2590, September 25, 2008)

Employment offer

Employment refers to job handling or offering advice and/or consultancy regardless of position or title, including outside director, advisor or consultant, or types of contract, and receiving wages or salaries as a price on a regular basis or for an agreed period.

Subject: offering an employment to a public official or the spouse of a public official in connection with the duties of the public official is prohibited. Other family member than the spouse such as the child or parent of the public official, as well as the public official, is not subject to the provision.

Value estimation: if, comprehensively considering the legality of holding another position under statutes or standards, the process of employment, actual work conditions, agreed wage, and the intent or opinion of the offender,

- in case when it constitutes a legitimate employment offer, the employment and the wages received thereby are all subject to money, goods, etc. provided from a legitimate source of right, which is stipulated as an exception.
- in case when it does not constitute a legitimate employment offer, the employment itself is subject to a prohibited financial benefit.

How to estimate value of an employment offer (suggestion)

- A monthly wage applying the minimum hourly wage published by the Minister of Employment and Labor in accordance with Article 10 of the Minimum Wage Act (minimum hourly wage as of 2016: 6,030 won, converted to monthly wage: 1,260,270 won)
- A monthly wage applying the average male or female laborer's daily wage from the nationwide statistics regularly surveyed by the wage statistics collection agency twice or more a year (average laborer's daily wage as of September 1, 2015: 89,566 won)
- One twelfth of the usual annual salary for an equivalent position or title in the legal body that offers employment
- The monthly wage by occupation according to the survey of work status by occupation developed and distributed by the Minister of Employment and Labor in accordance with Article 17 of the Statistics Act

Provided, that employment is a mere tool or method to offer financial benefits, the wage supposed to receive or received is deemed as the financial benefit accepted.

Judicial cases: the court ruled that in this case in which the defendant, a member of the Board of Audit and Inspection, asked the mutual savings bank on which the Financial Supervisory Service was conducting inspections at the request of the Board of Audit and Inspection to employ his elder brother and give monthly wages for a certain period and thereby was accused of violating the former Act on the Aggravated Punishment, Etc. of Specific Economic Crimes for receiving money and valuables in connection with an arrangement of matters belonging to the duties of an executive or employee of a financial firm, the accepted amount of financial benefits through the arrangement shall be the 100 million won, the total wages the brother received for ten months as the employment of the defendant's brother is deemed as a mere tool to offer money and valuables given all the facts related to the employment procedure, the actual work conditions, and the opinions of the provider and the defendant. (Seoul High Court Ruling 2011No3252, February 23, 2012)

F. Prohibited activities(1) Case of public officials, etc.

No public official, etc. shall accept, request, or promise to receive any unacceptable money, goods, etc.

'Request' refers to a case where a public official expresses an intention of solicitation for the other party to give money, goods, etc. regardless whether the other party responds to the request.

Should a public official request or promise to receive any money, goods, etc. to the same person and then receive the benefit from the same person, these conducts are combined and thereby constitute one violation (act of receiving).

(2) Provider

No one shall offer, promise, or express any intention to offer, any unacceptable money, goods, etc. to any public official.

'Offer' refers to providing any money, goods, etc. to a public official and leaving it into a condition for the other party to receive constitutes the offer.

Should anybody promise, or express an intention to offer, an unacceptable money, goods, etc. to the public official and then offer the benefit, these conducts are combined to constitute one violation (act of offering).

"Person" prescribed in Paragraph 5 of Article 8 of the Act on the prohibition of offering money, goods, etc., includes natural persons only and excludes legal persons.

(3) Relationships between the public official and the provider

With respect to money, goods, etc., only the acts of offering and receiving the benefit are needed, and therefore, the act of the provider may constitute violation of the Act even if the act of the recipient may not necessarily constitute violation.

The act of the provider will constitute violation even if a public official who commits violation submits a report on the case and/or returns the advantage and thereby is excluded from punishment.

Judicial cases: the court ruled that to constitute an offense of bribery, one party's act of offering a bribe and the other party's act of accepting the valuable goods (including forbearance) are needed, but this does not necessarily mean that the other party's act of accepting the bribe should constitute an offense of bribery. (Supreme Court decision 87Do1699, December 22, 1987)

G. Prohibition of the acceptance of money, goods, etc. by the spouse of a public official

(1) Overview

No spouse of a public official shall receive money, goods, etc. exceeding 1 million won per occasion in connection with the duties of the public official. The provision is grounded on the practical and economic relevancy between them as they share daily life together and forge one economic unit.

In order to prevent the possibility of over regulation, receiving money, goods, etc. in connection with the duties of a public official only is prohibited.

The spouse refers to the spouse in legal marriage relationship only since the Act does not explicitly stipulate to include the spouse in de facto marriage.

Precedents in general interpret the relative relationship from the legal point of view for criminal punishment.

Judicial cases:

- The court ruled that in this case in which a de facto mother, the victim, was in a lineal relationship, as the victim (female) took in the defendant, who was abandoned when he was a baby in front of her door, and registered a birth of him as if he were the biological child of her and her husband, which did not meet the requirements for adoption, the defendant and the victim did not constitute a relationship of mother and child, and thereby the defendant shall not be punished for the crime of lineal member murder even if the defendant murdered the victim. (Supreme Court decision 81Do2466, October 13, 1981)
- The court ruled that the relationships between the child born out of wedlock and his biological mother naturally constituted a legal kinship with the birth of the child regardless of the mother's recognition of the child or registering his birth. (Supreme Court decision 80Do1731, September 9, 1980)

Should a public official be aware of the fact that his or her spouse received money, goods, etc. in connection with his or her duties, the public has a duty to report the case. If the public official fails to file a report as described above, he or she shall be subject to an administrative fine or criminal punishment in tandem with the value of the benefit accepted.

The spouse of a public official not exceeding 1 million won in connection with the duties of the public official is not subject to punishment under the Act but can be subject to punishment under other Act and/or rules.

Act on the Aggravated Punishment, etc. of Specific Crimes

Article 3 (Acceptance of Bribe for Mediation)

Any person who receives, demands or promises any money or interest in connection with a mediation of matters belonging to the duties of the public official, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than five years, or a fine not exceeding ten million won.

Attorney-at-law Act

Article 111 (Penalty Provisions)

(1) Any person who has received or promised to receive money, valuables, entertainment or other benefits under the pretext of soliciting or arranging to solicit a public official handling a case or an affair for favors in connection with such case or affair, or has provided or promised to provide such things to a third party shall be punished by imprisonment with labor for not longer than five years or by a fine not exceeding ten million won. In such cases, such person may be punished by a fine and imprisonment with labor concurrently.

(2) Reference case

Pursuant to the Public Service Ethics Act, the property to be registered by a person liable for registration shall be the property of not only a person liable for registration as prescribed therein but also the spouse, lineal ascendants and lineal descendants of a person liable for registration.

In addition, any family member of a public official, etc. receives any gift from a foreign country or a foreigner in connection with the duties of such official shall report it without delay, and hand over such gift thereto (Article 4 (1), 15 (1) of the Public Service Ethics Act).

(3) Example case

Constructor B, Municipal Government Head (city mayor) A's elementary alumnus, was a bidder for the construction of a sports facility by the municipal government, and B attended the Social Welfare Facility Sponsors' Night Event hosted by A's spouse C and donated 3 million won.

Case 1: City Mayor A did not know the fact his spouse C received a 3 million won donation from B.

As City Mayor A is not liable to report the case and therefore, the provisions on punishment for violating the duty to report cannot apply to him, he is not subject to punishment.

Case 2: City Mayor A knew the fact that his spouse C received a 3 million won donation from B but did not report the case.

As the donation City Mayor A's spouse C received from B exceeds the minimum threshold for criminal punishment, 1 million won per occasion, A is subject to criminal punishment.

Case 3: City Mayor A knew and reported the fact that his spouse C received a 3 million won donation from B.

As City Mayor A knew the fact that his spouse C received an unacceptable financial or other advantage and reported the case, A is not subject to punishment imposed for violating the reporting duty as prescribed in the Act.

2 Exceptions for Prohibited Money, Goods, etc.

Article 8 (Prohibition of Receipt of Money, Goods, etc.)

- (3) An honorarium for an outside lecture, etc. described in Article 10, or any of the following shall not constitute money, goods, etc., the receipt of which is prohibited by paragraph (1) or (2):
1. Money, goods, etc. that a public institution offers to its public servants, etc. and seconded public servants, etc.; or a senior public servant, etc. offers to subordinate public servants, etc. for purposes of consolation, encouragement, reward, etc.;
 2. Money, goods, etc. the value of which is within the limits specified by Presidential Decree, in the form of food and beverages, congratulatory or condolence money, gifts, etc. offered for purposes of facilitating performance of duties, social relationships, rituals, or aid;
 3. Money, goods, etc. offered from a legitimate source of right such as payment of debts (excluding donation) incurred in a private transaction;
 4. Money, goods, etc. provided by relatives (relatives defined in Article 777 of the Civil Act) of a public servant, etc.;
 5. Money, goods, etc. provided by employees' mutual aid societies, clubs, alumni associations, hometown associations, friendship clubs, religious groups, social organizations, etc., related to a public servant, etc. to their members in accordance with the rules prescribed by respective organizations; and money, goods, etc. offered by those who have long-term and continuous relationships with a public servant, etc., such as a member of the aforementioned groups, to the public servant, etc. who is in need due to a disease, disaster, etc.;
 6. Money, goods, etc., provided uniformly in a normally accepted range by an organizer of an official event related to the duties of a public servant, etc. to all participants thereof, in the form of transportation, accommodation, food and beverages, etc.;
 7. Souvenirs, promotional goods, etc. to be distributed to multiple unspecified persons, or awards or prizes given in a contest, a raffle, or a lottery;
 8. Money, goods, etc. permitted by other Acts, subordinate statutes, standards, or societal rules and norms.

A. Overview

While money, goods, etc. is prohibited from accepting, eight exceptions are set to guarantee a normal social life and avoid over regulation under the Act.

As the Act is a rule to secure the fair and impartial performance of a public official's duties, protect society's trust in the public service, and fill the loopholes in existing anti-corruption statutes, it needs to be interpreted aligned with provisions of other statutes.

If a public official accepts any money, goods, etc. in connection with his or her duties and in return for a favor, and thereby the acceptance constitutes the offense of bribery under the Criminal Act, no exception can be made for the case.

B. Exception 1: Money, goods, etc. that a public institution or a senior public official offers (Subparagraph 1 of Paragraph 3 of Article 8 of the Act)

The term refers to money, goods, etc. that a public institution offers to public officials who belong to the institution or are on assignment thereto, or a senior public official offers to his or her subordinates to either raise their morale or console, encourage, or reward them.

As a supervisor and a subordinate are command-obedience relationships in accordance with duties, the relationships can exist only between the public officials who belong to the same public institution.

Financial benefits that a senior public official offers to his or her subordinates are restricted in terms of the purpose to either raise their morale or console, encourage, or reward them.

C. Exception 2: Food and beverages, congratulatory or condolence money, etc. (Subparagraph 2 of Paragraph 3 of Article 8 of the Act)

The term refers to food and beverages, congratulatory money, gifts, or other items that are offered to facilitate performance of duties or for social relationships, rituals, or assistance to festivities and funerals, the value of which is within the limit provided by Presidential Decree.

Food and beverages, and other gifts within the limit of value enough for the general public not to suspect the impartiality in the performance of official duties are recognized as an exception of the Act.

"Within the limit" provided by Presidential Decree means valued at the threshold thereby or less.

Pursuant to the provisions of the Act, the purpose of the offer is confined to facilitating performance of duties, receiving the financial benefit described above from a duty related person may be restricted even if they are within the value limit as prescribed.

With respect to the purpose of the offer, what relationships the public official and the provider have, whether they have a personal relationships, how and when they offer and accept the financial benefit described above, and whether the offer has any connection with the duties of the public official will be comprehensively reviewed to determine the possibility that the offer may affect the performance of the duties.

If the offer is made in connection with duties and in return for a favor, it will be subject to criminal punishment (the offense of bribery under the Criminal Act) and an administrative fine regardless of its value.

Any gift valued at the threshold or less is not allowed unless they meet the beforementioned purpose.

Restrictions on offering and receiving gifts related to the purpose (e.g.)

- Acceptance of gifts valued at the threshold amount or less from a person subject to investigation or unfavorable disposition
- Acceptance of gifts valued at the threshold amount or less from a civil petitioner who has applied for authorization and permission
- Homeroom teachers' acceptance of money or gifts valued at the threshold amount or less from a parent in connection with academic achievement assessment or performance evaluation

Note 1

Major foreign rules on prohibition of public officials' acceptance of gifts and exceptions

Country	Details
U.S.	Offering and accepting gifts exceeding 20 dollars (about 20,000 won) per occasion or 50 dollars (about 50,000 won) in any given calendar year is prohibited.
Japan	Accepting a gift exceeding 5,000 yen (about 50,000 won) per event requires to file a report.
U.K.	Accepting a gift exceeding 25-30 pounds (some 40,000-50,000 won) is prohibited.
Germany	Accepting a gift exceeding 25 euro requires an approval in advance.

Foreign cases

U.S.: 20 dollars per occasion, 50 dollars in any given calendar year

Gifts offered from a prohibited source or because of an official position are not allowed, but an exception applies to the gifts valued at 20 dollars or less per occasion or 50 dollars or less from a single prohibited source in any given calendar year.

Prohibited source includes any person who does business or seeks to do business with the public official's agency, conducts activities regulated by the official's agency, or has interests that may be substantially affected by performance or nonperformance of the official's official duties

Japan: 5,000 yen

Any national official, in principle, shall be prohibited from accepting, soliciting or promising to accept a bribe in connection with his or her duties from any stakeholder.

Middle and senior level public officials must submit a report of a gift of money, etc. valued at 5,000 yen or more (some 50 dollars) to the head of each ministry and agency. The items described in the report are the profit/value of the gift, the date of receipt, and name and address of the business operators, etc. who gave the gift.

U.K.: 25-30 pounds

Civil servants must not accept gifts or hospitality or receive other benefits from anyone which might reasonably be seen to compromise their personal judgement or integrity, and each ministry and city has established its own civil service code that stipulates the provisions on gifts and hospitality.

Civil servants of the City of London should seek the approval of the Monitoring Officer for gifts and/or hospitality worth 25 pounds (approx. 50 dollars) or more.

Officials at the U.K. Foreign Ministry must not accept gifts and/or hospitality valued at 30 pounds (approx. 47 dollars) or more.

Germany: 25 euro

In case of the federal government, each ministry or agency sets a standard of gifts as appropriate within the maximum threshold of 25 euro, but gifts valued more than 25 euro must be approved in advance by a supervisor.

The maximum threshold on gifts of the Federal Ministry of the Interior and the Federal Ministry of Justice and Consumer Protection is 25 euro and 5 euro, respectively.

Note 2

Precedents on gifts as social rituals versus bribes

Should a gift be given in connection with the duties of a public official and in return for a favor, it is recognized as a bribe even if it is offered and accepted for social relationships or rituals.

A gift recognized as custom may be allowed should it not make society in general suspect integrity in the performance of official duties.

Judicial case: the court ruled that to determine whether the money received by a public officer constituted bribery given in return for the performance or nonperformance of his or her duties must consider all relevant circumstances, including, but not limited to, the details of the duties, the relations between the duties and the provider of the benefits, any special, personal relationships between the parties, the amount of the benefits, and the process and the timing of offering and accepting the benefits, as well as in the light of the fact that the offense of bribery as its legal benefits to protect shall secure the impartiality in the performance of official duties and protect the trust of society therein, whether the public official's accepting the benefits made society in general suspect the impartiality in the performance of official duties. (Supreme Court decision 99Do1911, July 23, 1999)

(Supreme Court decision 83Do1499, April 10, 1984) • The court ruled that even if the 200,000 won received by the defendant was a relatively small amount, the money was offered and accepted for an arrangement in connection with the defendant's duties to hire parking managers, the benefits must not be regarded as a mere social ritual or social custom that deserved protection. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The court ruled that even if the defendant, head of a bank branch office, received an entertainment only totaled 83,500 won, the benefit could not be recognized as a mere social ritual given the relationships between the defendant and the bidder, the motive and process in which the defendant received the hospitality from the bidder, and the fact that the defendant accepted cash or checks several times in addition to the entertainment. (Supreme Court decision 96Do144, December 6, 1996) • The court ruled that the case in which the elementary school teacher received 150,000 won from the parent of a homeroom student constituted the offense of bribery. (Supreme Court decision 2006Do8779, November 27, 2008) • The court ruled that the case in which the elementary school teacher was treated with a fine dining worth 189,000 won at hotel from the parent of a homeroom student constituted bribery. (Supreme Court decision 2006Do37, January 25, 2007) • The court ruled not guilty for the defendant in the case in which the defendant, who worked for the road construction division of the general construction headquarters, was offered with a meal worth 31,500 won from the non-prosecuted, citing the facts that they paid the cost of meals alternately before and after the occasion, and the meal at that time cost only 31,500 won and thereby the hospitality shall be recognized as a social ritual. (Supreme Court decision 2007Do10722, February 29, 2008)

D. Exception 3: money, goods, etc. that is offered from a legitimate source of right due to a private transaction, such as the payment of debts (Subparagraph 3 of Paragraph 3 of Article 8 of the Act)

The recognition and scope of a legitimate source of right

Exception 3 refers to money, goods, etc. that is offered from a legitimate source of right due to a private transaction (excluding donations), including but not limited to the payment of debts.

The scope of private transactions without any connection with the performance of duties can be formed under the principle of private autonomy as far as the legal order allows.

The lexical-semantic meanings of "legitimate" and "source of right" are "fair or reasonable" and "the source out of which a right arises," respectively.

As the provision states "legitimate" and "source of right, whether a source of right exists and the source of right is legitimate need to be considered. Whether the private transaction is normal needs to be determined, considering the objective and the legitimacy of the offer.

This means that the legitimacy of the offer must be recognized not only by the existence of a source of right, but also by the legitimacy of the source of right.

Not only donations, explicitly excluded from the legitimate source of right in the provision, but also a loan of use, a loan for consumption for free, etc. can also be excluded from the legitimate source of right based on their legitimacy.

Loan for consumption for free of interest: Denial of a legitimate source of right

The amount of interest can be evaluated as a fake legal relationship that disguises de facto gifts of money.

The free loan cannot be recognized as an exception given the legislative intent of the Act to secure the impartiality in the performance of the duties of public officials and protect the trust of society therein.

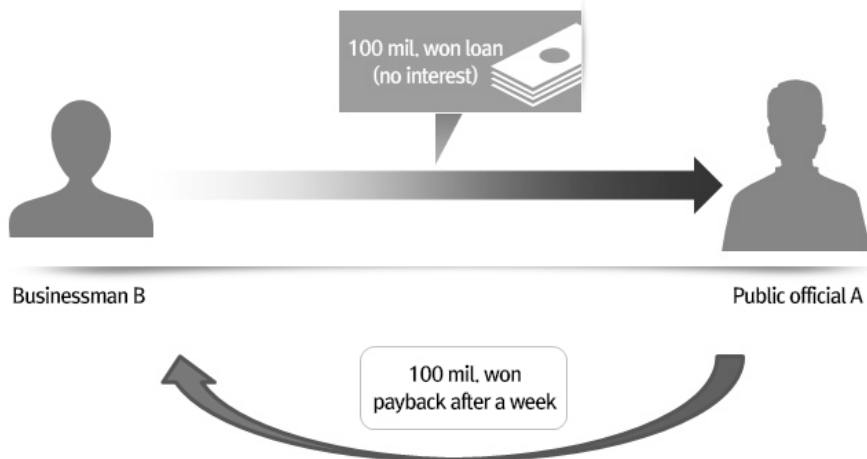

A loan for consumption for free of interest is not subject to a "legitimate source of right in return or as a price for compensation" such as the payment of debts as a private transaction prescribed in the provision.

In this case, the value of the loan is the interest rate when to borrow it from a financial institution, but if it is not readily determined, the value must be estimated by reference to the statutory interest rate, pursuant to the precedent (Supreme Court decision 2008Do2590, September 25, 2008).

Judicial case: the court ruled that given that any public official's borrowing a loan without any expiry date and/or interest in connection with his or her duties constituted bribery, the defendant, command sergeant major, borrowed money for free of interest from the parent of a soldier in the battalion and thereby received a bribe by acquiring a financial benefit equivalent to the interest amount. (Supreme Court decision 2004Do1442, May 28, 2004)

Example case

Public Official A borrowed 100 million won from Businessman B, with whom A had personal relationships, to purchase the real estate B informed of and returned the money in one week.

Loan of use: Denial of a legitimate source of right

The loan of use is to use the object for free and thereby gain benefit, and the amount equivalent to the rate for use can be evaluated as a fake legal relationships to disguise de facto gifts of money.

Example case

A lawyer offered a Mercedes-Benz car to a prosecutor to use for free of charge.

Disguised transaction: Denial of a legitimate source of right

The transaction is null and void as it intends to disguise the offering such as the gifts of properties even if there exists a source of right. This means that the donation as a hidden act in the disguised transaction, is valid but excludes from a legitimate source of right.

The value of money, goods, etc. received is equivalent to the amount received, not deducting incidental expenses incurred even if the expenses were invested or economic benefit was offered to receive the financial benefit (Supreme Court decision 99Do1683, October 8, 1999).

Example case

The case in which high-ranking official A received a notable drawing worth 100 million won at the market price for 10 million won from Businessman B and disguised it as a transaction

The transaction, the external conduct (disguised act), shall be null and void and the donation as a hidden act (concealed conduct) shall be valid as the transaction in which A purchased the drawing from B is a conduct to disguise the gift.

The transaction cannot be recognized as a legitimate source of right as it is null and void, and donation, a valid conduct, shall be excluded from a legitimate source of right under the Act.

High-ranking public official A is subject to criminal punishment for receiving money, goods, etc. exceeding 1 million won per occasion from B.

Businessman B is subject to criminal punishment for offering money, goods, etc. exceeding 1 million won per occasion to A.

E. Exception 4: money, goods, etc. that relatives offer (Subparagraph 4 of Paragraph 3 of Article 8 of the Act)

Under Article 777 of the Civil Act, the term 'relatives' refers to blood relatives within the eighth degree of relationship, affinity relatives within the fourth degree of relationship, and spouse.

Blood relatives include biological blood relatives (lineal blood relatives and collateral blood relatives) and legal relatives (adoption).

Spouse means the one of a legal marriage, not the one of a de facto marriage.

F. Exception 5: money, goods, etc. in accordance with the rules prescribed by respective organizations or from those who have long-term and continuous relationships (Subparagraph 5 of Paragraph 3 of Article 8 of the Act)

Exception 5 includes money, goods, etc. that employees' mutual aid societies, clubs, social organizations, etc. related to a public official offer to their members in accordance with the rules prescribed by respective organizations.

It also includes money, goods, etc. that those who have long-term and continuous relationships, including but not limited to a member of the same organizations with the public official, give the public official who is in need due to a disease or other kind of disaster.

A main argument point here is the scope of violation in the case where money, goods, etc. offered exceeds the rules prescribed by respective organizations.

In addition, another argument point is the meaning of "long-term and continuous relationships" and "in need due to a disease or other kind of disaster" and related criteria to determine the conditions.

money, goods, etc. exceeding the rules prescribed by respective organizations

As the benefit is acceptable once meeting the rules, the excess part of the benefit is subject to prohibition. In addition, money, good, etc. must be provided by the person representing organizations complying with the rules, and the offer given by a member of organizations are not subject to the exception.

Example case

While the rules of an elementary school alumni association set the threshold for congratulatory or condolence money at 1 million won, Chairman B of the association gave 2.5 million won to the marriage of a child of Public Official A, who worked for a government ministry.

Public Official A is subject to criminal punishment for accepting money exceeding 1 million per occasion. As the rules of the association allow 1 million won for the marriage of a member's child, the 1.5 million won of the excess part cannot be recognized as an exception.

Chairman B is subject to criminal punishment for offering money exceeding 1 million per occasion to Public Official A.

Long-term and continuous relationships or for those in need due to a disease or other kind of disaster

Long-term and continuous relationships: a single standard cannot be applied to judging the relationships, but it requires to consider the cause or any occasion that created the relationships, the duration and frequency of exchange and/or contact to find out whether a "special" personal relationship exists.

As the source of the offer is prescribed as including "but not limited to" a member of the same organizations with the public official, a person who has a long-term and continuous relationships, equivalent to the members of the organizations described above is subject to the provision.

Friends from the same hometown, seniors or juniors from the same school or from the same workplace, or others connected with regional, academic, or blood ties, do not constitute a special personal relationships.

Needy conditions: other than a disease and/or disaster, conditions, including but not limited to stock investment and sending a child overseas to study, are not recognized to an exception.

G. Exception 6: money, goods, etc. uniformly provided by an organizer of an official event related to the duties of a public official (Subparagraph 6 of Paragraph 3 of Article 8 of the Act)

The term includes transportation, accommodation, and food and drink in a normally accepted range that are uniformly provided by an organizer of an official event related to the duties of a public official. Main argument points here are the definitions of "official event, normally accepted range, and uniformly."

Official event: it refers to an event only related to the duties of a public official and hosted by an organization or institution such as a public agency and a private company.

Judgment on the term needs to comprehensively consider conditions such as the host and participants, the purpose and details of the event, and internal approval for the bearing of costs and other items related to the event organization.

Normally accepted range: it refers to money, goods, etc. recognized as equivalent of financial benefits to be provided in a similar event.

Judgment on the term needs to consider similar types of event, the venue and the purpose of the event, the list of participants and their position, the internal standard of the hosting organization and its capacity to bear the costs.

Uniformly: should an offer be confined to a certain individual or a group, not uniformly, it is not subject to the exception herein.

However, this does not mean that the advantage provided should be absolutely the same for all participants, but it can differ by each participant based on their assuming role.

A public official needs to consult with the head (anti-corruption officer) of the organization to which the public official belongs to seek judgment on an official event related to the duties of a public official and the usual range.

H. Exception 7: Souvenirs or promotional goods or awards or prizes by a contest or lottery (Subparagraph 7 of Paragraph 3 of Article 8 of the Act)

Subparagraph 7 includes souvenirs or promotional goods distributed to many and unspecified persons, or awards or prizes that are given by a contest or lottery.

As money, goods, etc. distributed to many and unspecified persons does not affect the performance or of the duties of a public official and thereby it is prescribed as an exception, the meaning of many and unspecified persons is a main argument point here.

The concept of many and unspecified persons is not about numbers but about the randomness in selecting targets.

Whether money, goods, etc. is subject to souvenirs or promotional goods needs to be determined based on the inscription of the organization's name and/or logo, and the purpose, value and the number of units of production.

There is no specific threshold in the price of the product, but the price should be within an appropriate range enough to be deemed as souvenirs or promotional goods in the light of social norms.

Also categorized as an exception is awards or prizes that are given by a contest or lottery in a fair manner.

Even if the candidates of awards or prizes are specified through application, their winning is recognized as an exception as long as the application process is open to many and unspecified persons.

I. Exception 8: money, goods, etc. permitted by other statutes and/or standards, or social norms (Subparagraph 8 of Paragraph 3 of Article 8 of the Act)

Statutes: the exception includes, but not limited to, contributions under the Political Fund Act, child rearing and care allowances under the Infant Care Act, and medical care expenses and accident relief money under the Public Officials Pension Act.

Offering and accepting money, goods, etc. entitled as a political fund shall constitute bribery if it is offered in return for the performance or nonperformance of duties.

Judicial case: the court ruled that offering and accepting money, goods, etc. entitled as a political fund shall constitute bribery as long as it was made in return for the performance of the duties of a public official and politician. (Supreme Court decision 97Do2609, December 26, 1997)

Standards: the exception only applies to the money, goods, etc. allowed under the internal standards or rules of the organization to which a public official, who receives money, goods, etc., belongs.

The internal standards refer to those of the organization of a public official, who receives money, goods, etc., not those of the organization to which the provider of the benefit belongs that allows the offer.

Social rules: money, goods, etc. is subject to an exception if it is deemed acceptable in the light of the entire notion of legal order and/or social ethics or social norms in a broader sense.

The concept herein is inevitably unspecified as given complex and fast changing conditions in society, specifying all possible occasions allowed by social norms is impossible to prescribe in the Act.

Judgment on the social rules needs to comprehensively consider the motive and objective of the offer and reception, the relationships between related parties, the value of the accepted benefit, and the potential connection to a request.

Judicial case: the court ruled that the term "action that does not violate the social rules" set forth in Article 20 of the Criminal Act referred to the act that could be tolerated in the light of the entire notion of the legal order or social ethics or social norms that lied behind the notion, and therefore, an act shall be deemed justifiable should it meet the requirements, including, but not limited to, the legitimacy of the motive or purpose, the adequacy in the means or method of the action, the balance of legal interests between protection and infringement, urgency, and the non-supplementary nature of the means other than the act. (Supreme Court decision 99Do1683, October 8, 1999)

Example cases

- As an marketing campaign, an automaker offered discount for a certain occupation, such as public officials or teachers.
- As an airliner over-booked economy seats, the seats of public officials incidentally upgraded to business seats.
- Food and beverage were offered to the guests of festivities or funerals.

- (8) Except as expressly provided in paragraphs (1) through (7), any other matter necessary for reporting or disposing of prohibited money, goods, etc. shall be prescribed by Presidential Decree.

A. Reporting and return of prohibited money, goods, etc.

(1) Reporting duty

Any public official shall immediately report, in writing (including e-document), the case where the public official and/or the spouse of the public official receives prohibited money, goods, etc. to the head of the relevant agency. Items to be reported are personal information of the reporter, purport, purpose and details of the report which may contain personal information of the provider, types and value of the money, goods, etc. received and whether it was returned.

The report shall be filed with evidence, if available, as a proof to prevent a false or improper reporting. No one who knew or could know that the information in the report he or she submitted was false or for improper purpose shall receive protection or rewards under the Act, and anybody who reports false information for the purpose of having a criminal or disciplinary punishment imposed upon another, shall constitute false accusation under the Criminal Act.

A report may be submitted to a supervisory body, the Board of Audit and Inspection, an investigative agency or the Anti-Corruption and Civil Rights Commission.

(2) Duty to return and/or deliver money, goods, etc.

Should a public official receive the prohibited financial benefits by himself or herself, he or she shall immediately return and/or deliver them.

Should a public official be aware that his or her spouse received prohibited financial benefits, the public official shall immediately have his or her spouse return them to the provider or have his or her spouse manifest an intention to reject them.

Provided, that the public official shall deliver the received items which can be decay or deteriorate, to the head of the relevant institution.

Delivery is needed in any of the following cases: In the event that the item is subject to loss, decay, or deterioration, the provider of the money, goods, etc. is unknown, and any other situations where it is difficult to return the money, goods, etc. to the provider.

(3) Timing of reporting, return and/or delivery

Submitting a report of and returning the money, goods, etc. shall be made without delay, and "without delay" means "without unnecessary delay."

Should a legitimate reason that blocks the immediate reporting and/or returning exist, the reporting and/or returning should be made right after the reason is over.

"Without delay" needs to be determined depending on each case specifically and individually, not applying a single standard across the board.

(4) Effect of reporting and return and/or delivery

A public official who "without delay" submits a report or returns and/or delivers as prescribed in Paragraph 1, 2, or 6 of Article 9 are excluded from punishment.

Exemption from punishment is made based on whether the reporting or returning and/or delivery is done "without delay."

However, the case in which a public official voluntarily submitted a report but the filing was done "with a delay" may be subject to the reduction of punishment.

B. Follow-ups of the head of the relevant Agency

Request for Return, etc.: a head of the relevant agency shall have the public official return or deliver the money, goods, etc., or express an intention to reject the money, goods, etc.

When investigation is deemed necessary, the head shall immediately notify an investigative agency of the details thereof.

Should a public official be aware that his or her spouse received the prohibited financial benefits and the spouse refuses to return them, the head shall require the spouse to return them to the provider.

Measures on the relevant official: the head of the relevant agency may take measures, including, but not limited to, provisional suspension of performing the duties, designation of a substitute, and change of position.

Notwithstanding of the provision beforehand, the head may let the public official continue his or her duties in any of the following cases and have an official in charge or other public official verify and check regularly as to whether the public official performs the duties uprightly.

Such exceptional cases include when it is difficult to find a substitute for the public official who can perform the duty; the performance of the duties of the public official is marginally affected; and the necessity of continuing the duties is greater in the light of protecting national security, developing the national economy and promoting any other public interest.

Measures for dealing with unlawful performance of duties: should a public official, etc. be found to have been in violation of the provisions during or subsequent to the performance of his or her duties, the head shall take necessary measures, including, but not limited to, suspension or cancellation of the duties.

4 Restriction on an Honorarium for an Outside Lecture

Article 10 (Restriction on the Acceptance of Honoraria for Outside Lectures, etc.)

- (1) No public servant, etc. shall accept money exceeding the limits specified by Presidential Decree as an honorarium for a lecture, presentation, or contribution related to his/her duties or requested based on de facto influence arising from his/her position or responsibilities (hereinafter referred to as "outside lecture, etc.") at a training course, promotional event, forum, seminar, public hearing, or any other meeting.
- (2) If a public servant, etc. conducts an outside lecture, etc., he/she shall report, in advance, in writing, the details of the request for the outside lecture, etc., to the head of the relevant institution, as prescribed by Presidential Decree: Provided, That the foregoing shall not apply if the request for the outside lecture, etc. is made by the State or a local government.
- (3) If it is impractical to make a report on the outside lecture, etc. in advance, as prescribed in the main sentence of paragraph (2), the public servant, etc. may report in writing within two days from the day when the outside lecture, etc. is finished.
- (4) If the head of a relevant institution deems an outside lecture, etc., reported by a public servant, etc. pursuant to paragraph (2), may hinder fair performance of duties, the head of the relevant institution may restrict the outside lecture, etc.
- (5) If a public servant, etc. received an honorarium exceeding the limits described in paragraph (1), he/she shall report to the head of the relevant institution, etc. and return, without delay, the excess amount to the provider, as prescribed by Presidential Decree.

Article 23 (Imposition of Administrative Fines)

- (4) A public servant, etc. who fails to report and return pursuant to Article 10 (5) shall be subject to an administrative fine not exceeding five million won.

A. Legislative intent

Some have continued to voice their concerns that excessive outside lectures by some public officials and their excessive honorariums can be abused as an indirect way to offer and receive financial benefits.

Expensive gratuities provided to public officials from businesses or interest groups can be abused as bribes that can or will affect the performance or nonperformance of official duties.

An honorarium for an outside lecture is provided to compensate labor and to utilize and/or share expert knowledge. Therefore, only the outside lectures that are related to duties or requested due to a de facto influential power pertaining to the position or title of a public official should be subject to the provisions herein.

Furthermore, offering and/or receiving the amount exceeding the threshold of gratuities shall be prohibited through setting the maximum ceiling to prevent the gratuities abused as an circumventing or indirect method to offer financial benefits.

B. Scope of outside lectures

(1) Relationships between Article 8 (Prohibition of Receipt of Money, Goods, etc.) and Article 10 (Restriction on the Acceptance of Honoraria for Outside Lectures, etc.) of the Act

Article 8 of the Act regulates the direct acceptance of money, goods, etc. by a public official or the spouse of a public official.

Article 10 of the Act regulates the circumventing or indirect acceptance of money, goods, etc. by a public official in the form of a honorarium of an outside lecture, etc.

Some part of an honorarium for an outside lecture are excluded from the provisions on prohibition as the honorarium is also provided in return for a lecture, etc.

Money, goods, etc. other than an honorarium for an outside lecture shall be subject to the provisions of Article 8 as Article 10 is a special provision to Article 8.

(2) Criteria for the scope of outside lectures

The outside lecture subject to Article 10 is the one related to duties of a public official and in the form of a meeting to share or discuss opinions and/or knowledge with many, unspecified persons.

Outside lectures without any connection to the duties, not intended to many people, or not in the form of a meeting shall not be subject to the provisions of Article 10.

The provisions only apply to the cases in which an request for an outside lecture is made to a public official in connection with his or her duties or affected by the influential power arising from his or her position and/or title.

"Related to his/her duties" means "related to any function or activity the public official handles pertaining to his or her position."

The lecture should be a venue to share opinions or knowledge with many persons or in the form of a meeting for a training course, promotional event, forum, seminar, or public hearing.

The service targeting many persons or in the form of a meeting includes, but not limited to, a lecture, class, contribution, presentation, discussion, deliberation, evaluation, resolution, and consultancy.

However, a service or consultancy not targeting many people or in the form of a meeting is not subject to the outside lecture prescribed in the provisions of Article 10.

(3) Regulations on the gratuities for a service or consultancy

The gratuities for a service or consultancy, which is not a outside lecture, shall be subject to Article 8 (Prohibition of Receipt of Money, Goods, etc.).

In particular, whether the gratuities are subject to money, goods, etc. provided by a legitimate source of right stipulated as an exception in Subparagraph 3 of Paragraph 3 of Article 8 needs to be reviewed.

A service or consultancy contract may be subject to a source of right, but in that case, the legitimacy of the source needs to be reviewed separately.

The legitimacy of the source shall be determined based on the appropriateness of the compensation through comprehensively considering the provisions of related statutes and/or standards, features of related duties, expertise, and the mission and characteristics of the relevant agency.

C. Reporting an outside lecture in advance and restrictions

A public official shall report, in writing, the details of the request for the outside lecture or relevant activity in advance to the head of the relevant agency.

The report on an outside lecture should be submitted in advance regardless of whether the public official receives a gratuity. Provided, that he or she needs not to report the case if the request is made by the State or a local government.

A public official may submit a written report on an outside lecture within two days from the day when the outside lecture is finished should it be difficult to make a report on it in advance.

A head of the relevant agency may restrict an outside lecture that a public official reported should it be deemed affecting the performance of the duties of the public official.

D. Reporting and return of the excess part of an honorarium

Should a public official receive an honorarium exceeding the amount as prescribed in the Act, he or she shall report the described fact to the head of the relevant agency and return the excess part to the provider.

A public official is subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 5 million won unless he or she submits a report and return the excess part.

As the public official needs to accomplish both the reporting and the return, he or she will be subject to an administrative fine should he or she fail to do one of them.

Reward

In case the report contributed to recovering or increasing the revenue of an institution in the private sector only without any recovery or increase in national funds, reward payment shall not take place.

It's because rewards are paid from the national fund after the report was proved to have contributed to recovering or increasing national fund or reducing its expenses,

3 Notification of Imposition of Administrative Fines

Article 23 (Imposition of Administrative Fines)

(7) The head of a relevant institution shall notify a competent court, having jurisdiction over cases of administrative fines under the Non-Contentious Case Procedure Act, of a violation committed by those subject to the administrative fines set forth in paragraphs (1) through (5).

Should an inspection agency receive a report or receive a report transferred, it shall carry out a necessary inspection of the subject matter of the report and notify a relevant agency if it is subject to an administrative fine.

The Anti-Corruption and Civil Rights Commission shall verify the subject matter of the report and transfer the report to a relevant agency if it is deemed as subject to an administrative fine.

The head of a relevant agency shall notify a competent court, which shall proceed to a trial on an administrative fine, of the violation committed by a person subject to an administrative fine.

Upon notification of the violation the court shall impose an administrative fine in the form of a trial (decision) pursuant to the Non-Contentious Case Litigation Procedure Act.

Similar legislative case:

Article 30 (Administrative Fines) of the Public Service Ethics Act

(4) The competent public service ethics committee shall notify the court to commence a trial on the administrative fine under the Non-Contentious Case Litigation Procedure Act of the violations of persons subject to an administrative fine under paragraphs (1) through (3).

The head of a relevant agency may notify a competent court not only of its public official, etc. who commits a violation but also of a civilian who makes an improper solicitation or offers money, goods, etc.

4 Revocation of Imposition of Administrative Fines

Article 23 (Imposition of Administrative Fines)

- (1) Any of the following persons shall be subject to an administrative fine not exceeding 30 million won:
1. A public servant, etc. (including private persons performing public duties under Article 11) who makes an improper solicitation to another public servant, etc. (including private persons performing public duties under Article 11) for a third party, in violation of Article 5 (1): Provided, That no administrative fine shall be imposed if criminal punishment is imposed under the Criminal Act or any other Act; if criminal punishment is imposed after an administrative fine is imposed, the imposition of the administrative fine shall be revoked;

A case on which an administrative fine has already been imposed may be subject to a criminal punishment again under the Criminal Act and other Acts or the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act.

As a criminal punishment and an administrative fine have different purposes and content, concurrent imposition of them on one action is not a violation of the non bis in idem principle

However no administrative fine shall be imposed should he or she have been subject to a criminal punishment under the Criminal Act and other acts

Should he or she have been subject to a criminal punishment under the Criminal Act and other Acts after an administrative fine is imposed, the imposition thereof shall be revoked. The term ‘after an administrative fine is imposed‘ means ‘after a judgment on an administrative fine becomes final and conclusive.

Should he or she have been subject to a criminal punishment under the Criminal Act and other Acts after a judgment on an administrative fine became final and conclusive, the imposition thereof may be revoked pursuant to Revocation of Imposition under the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act. (under the provisos to Article 23 Paragraph 1 Subparagraph 1, Paragraph 2, Paragraph 3 and Paragraph 5)

5 Responsibility of Legal Persons (Joint Penal Provisions)

Article 24 (Joint Penalty Provisions)

If a representative of a juridical person or an organization; or an agent, an employee or any other worker employed by a juridical person, an organization, or an individual, commits, in connection with the affairs of the juridical person, the organization, or the individual, any of the violations set forth in: Article 22 (1) 3, excluding where the provider of the money, goods, etc. is a public servant, etc. (including private persons performing public duties to whom Article 8 applies mutatis mutandis pursuant to Article 11); Article 23 (2); Article 23 (3); or Article 23 (5) 3, excluding where the provider of the money, goods, etc. is a public servant, etc. (including private persons performing public duties to whom Article 8 applies mutatis mutandis pursuant to Article 11), not only shall the violator be punished but the juridical person, the organization, or the individual shall also be subject to the fines or administrative fines specified in relevant provisions: Provided, That the foregoing shall not apply if the juridical person, the organization, or the individual was not neglect in paying due attention to and supervising the relevant affairs, in order to prevent such violation.

A. Responsibility of legal persons, etc. and exceptions to application

Should an employee or other servant of a legal person, organization, or individual commit a violation in connection with his or her duties, not only shall the violator be punished, but the employer (including a specific individual, organization, or legal person) shall be sanctioned pursuant to Joint Penalty Provisions (Article 24).

Provided, that Joint Penalty Provisions shall not apply when the provider of money, goods, etc. is a public official, etc.

B. Grounds for exemption from responsibility of legal persons (due attention and supervision)

(1) Grounds for exemption

Joint Penalty Provisions shall not apply where an employer has not been negligent in giving due attention and supervision concerning the relevant duties so as to prevent such violation.

Here, the issue is how much attention and supervision the employer shall give so as to prevent such violation committed by the employee or other servant of a legal person, organization, or individual to be exempt.

(2) Criteria for judgment on due attention and supervision

Criteria for judging whether the employer gave due attention and supervision so as to prevent such violation under the Improper Solicitation and Graft Act shall be established through cases going forward.

Concerning responsibility of legal persons, etc. under other acts, precedents decided that whether due attention and supervision were given shall be judged based on all situations related to a violation (Supreme Court decision, 2009Do5824, February 25, 2010).

All situations related to a violation include the purport of the enactment of the law, the degree of the expected violation of the benefit of the law due to the violation, the purport of responsibility of legal persons, etc. regarding the violation, the details of the violation and the degree of damage or results actually caused, the size of the legal person's business, the supervisability of the violator or the specific supervisory relationship, measures actually taken by the legal person so as to prevent the violation, etc.

Whether an effective anti-corruption compliance program is run may be a consideration in judgment on whether due attention and supervision were given.

Note 1

Anti-corruption compliance³⁾

As for the US, whether a company has designed and been running an effective anti-corruption program is one of the most important considerations in determination of indictment and punishment.

The key is not whether an anti-corruption program is put in place but whether it is effectively run.

Effective compliance program factors of the US Foreign Corrupt Practices Act guide

- Should present clear promises and policies to ensure that all corruption not to mention in the upper echelon including executives will not be forgiven
- Should develop a clear and detailed code of ethics to spread and instil in all employees
- Should put the organization's human and material resources into development and implementation of a compliance program such as personnel capable of taking charging of this process
- Should always improve a compliance program by assessing risks faced by the company effectively and constantly
- Should carry out communication through a constant, company-wide training to ensure that the company's anti-corruption compliance program is thoroughly executed and established
- Should put in place appropriate and clear disciplinary procedures for those committing a corrupt practice as well as clear incentives for employees regarding development and improvement of the compliance program or exposure of a corrupt act
- Should put in place a procedure and system to ensure that when there is a suspicion of corruption, insiders can internally bring a charge of or report a corrupt act without worrying about retaliation or confidentiality and a system to ensure fact-finding and accountability through a thorough and effective investigation without a cover-up when someone blows the whistle

Note 2Grounds for Exemption in the Guide for the UK Bribery Act⁴⁾

In the case of the UK, if a superior organization's employee, agent, subsidiary or relevant person offer bribery to another person with the intention of winning a contract or of obtaining benefits in the course of doing business for the superior organization, a criminal responsibility shall be imposed on the superior organization.

Provided, that if the superior organization proves that it has taken adequate procedures to prevent the relevant person's bribery, it can be exempt.

6 principles of the UK Foreign Bribery Act guide

- Proportionate procedures: A superior organization should put in place anti-corruption policies and procedures that are proportionate to the nature, magnitude, complexity, etc. of corruption risks and tasks facing it
- Top-level commitment: A superior organization's top-level officials should express their resolve and will not to tolerate corruption
- Risk assessment: A superior organization should monitor and assess the nature and extent of all types of expected corruption risks it is exposed to on a regular basis
- Due diligence: A superior organization should exercise thorough due diligence for persons performing duties for itself or on its behalf to reduce corruption risks
- Communication(including training): A superior organization should implement communication through various ways including training to ensure that its own anti-corruption policies and procedures spread throughout the organization and are embodied by itself
- Monitoring and review: A superior organization should not only constantly monitor and review its anti-corruption policies and procedures but put efforts into improving them whenever necessary

Note 3

Summary of issues regarding legal persons

Whether a solicitation by a legal person's employee is one for a third party

'An improper solicitation made directly for himself or herself' that is not subject to an administrative fine means a solicitation where its legal effects (advantages and disadvantages) are directly attributed to the solicitor.

As a legal person and an employee are separate independent subjects of rights and duties and an employee's solicitation related to his or her duties is for a legal person and its effects are also attributed to the legal person, such a solicitation constitutes a solicitation for a third party.

Criteria for judging the same solicitations for a legal person

Whether two solicitations are the same improper solicitations is determined based on whether the details of such improper solicitations are essentially identical to those of "the public official, etc. who is required to report."

The scope of the same improper solicitation should be defined from the perspective of public officials, etc. in accordance with the purport of the reporting procedures to protect innocent public officials, etc.

Should multiple employees of a legal person make improper solicitations with the same details in connection with their duties, they constitute the same improper solicitations for which the duty of reporting occurs.

Whether a legal person is the provider of money, goods, etc.

One of the issues in Article 8 (Prohibition of Receipt of Money, Goods, etc.) is whether in addition to natural persons, a legal person without capacity to actually offer money, goods, etc., that is, criminal capacity, shall count as 'the same person' as a subject that offers money, goods, etc. to a public official.

Whether it is the same person shall be decided, not formally based on who directly delivers money, goods, etc. but based on who 'the actual provider' is

Furthermore, 'the same person' is a matter of where or who the source of money, goods, etc. is. As the source of money, goods, etc. is important, in principal a legal person as well as a natural person may count as 'the same person'.
